

Fight Off Aerial Attackers, Order To U. S. Marines

Told to Fire in Self-Defense in Event Of Raids
CHAPEI IN FLAMES
Chinese, Japanese Set Section of Shanghai Ablaze

Shanghai (U)—United States marines were authorized today to open fire in self-defense on any airplane attacking them or noncombatants in their sector of the International Settlement.

Admiral Harry Yarnell, commander of the United States Asiatic fleet, authorized the defensive measure as fierce fighting, intensified by the retreat of Chinese troops from Chapei to a new defense line, raged menacingly around the International Settlement.

Tremendous fires set by the embattled Chinese and Japanese raged through Chapei, native quarter of north Shanghai, and even penetrated the settlement at one point. Chinese aircraft raided the Yangtzeppoo section, dropping incendiary bombs which started more fires.

The combat brought into play the full power of Japanese warships in the Whangpoo and Chinese land batteries. They fired steadily until after midnight.

Result of Jap Attacks
Admiral Yarnell's action grew out of repeated attacks by Japanese forces on Chinese positions along the edges of the settlement. These raids reached a climax Sunday when a Japanese fire machine gunned British troops and a party of British and American horseback riders on Kewich road, killing one British soldier.

The British immediately ordered their troops to act in self-defense if such an attack were repeated.

United States authorities said 50 caliber anti-aircraft machine guns, making up part of the armament of the Sixth regiment of marines, had not been set up yet. They hoped it would not be necessary to bring them into play.

Yarnell's Order
Admiral Yarnell's order said: "In case of attack with bombs or machine guns by airplanes of any nationality on defense forces or non-combatants in the sector defended by the second United States marine brigade, the commander-in-chief has authorized these forces to open fire in self-defense."

This was an extension of an order given the Asiatic fleet Sept. 2. This precaution against a military emergency was taken as flames penetrated the settlement at one point and by mid-afternoon had consumed a square block of closely packed houses on Tibet road. All available foreign fire engines were deployed along Soochow creek, which flows between Chapei and the international area, to keep the blaze from spreading.

Wind Helps Firemen
Settlement authorities were optimistic of success because the wind was from the east, blowing the flames parallel to the settlement boundary. Should the wind veer to blow from the north the settlement would be in danger of destruction.

Tonight promised to be one of the most uneasy since the Shanghai warfare started.

The fires were started by both Chinese and Japanese. Chinese put torches to buildings to cover their retreat from positions they had held for more than two months. Japanese did likewise to drive Chinese rear-guard snipers from barricades and blasted ruins.

Flames first broke out in Chapei at dawn, when Chinese began their general retreat. In the afternoon the northern and western skies were clouded with black smoke. Over an expanse of six or seven miles towers of flame shot skyward.

West of the settlement, fires broke out near Shanghai-Nanking railway tracks, further encircling the foreign area.

Aerial Attacks
British and American forces guarding settlement borders against possible military emergencies became fire guards as well.

As the flames roared on, Japanese warplanes strafed retreating Chinese with bombs and machine gun bullets. The Japanese announced their forces had occupied Chapei.

REJECTS INVITATION
Japanese Foreign Minister Koki Hirota (above) today rejected an invitation for Japan to participate in the nine-power conference at Brussels for discussion of the Sino-Japanese war. An informal statement was released at the same time, saying that Japan was fighting in self-defense. It also asserted that the "difficulties can be settled only by direct negotiations between the two powers."

Roosevelt Says U. S. Will Avoid War, but Will Keep Up Adequate Sea Defenses

Insurgent Drive Seen to Divide Loyalist Spain

Franco Massing Large Bodies of Troops North of Teruel

Madrid (U)—A new drive to cut government Spain into two parts was believed foreshadowed today by reports of huge concentrations of insurgent troops north of Teruel.

The Teruel battle area, comparatively quiet while Francisco Franco's armies were "eliminating" the northwestern front, is really the southern tip of the long Aragon front, reaching from the French frontier to a point about 135 miles due east of Madrid. It juts into 80 miles of the Mediterranean, just north of Valencia.

The closing of that 80-mile gap would cut off Catalonia, prospective seat of the republican government, from the rest of government Spain, including Valencia and Madrid.

Julia Alvarez del Vayo, Valencia's League of Nations representative, addressing government troops near Teruel on an inspection tour, said that with the approach of a hard winter campaign they would play a major role.

Plans Major Drive
"The Teruel front is no longer in a secondary position," he declared. Government sources said Franco, the insurgent generalissimo, also was massing forces, including air.

Fire which broke out immediately after the collision destroyed five cars and the caboose of the freight train and damaged a combination mail and smoker on the passenger.

Japs Decline 9-Power Bid To Conference

Tell Belgium Confab Would Mean 'Serious Obstacles to Solution'

OUTLINE POSITION
Nippon Fighting in Self-Defense, Statement Asserts

Tokio (U)—Japan formally declined today the invitation to participate in the Brussels conference of nine-power pact adherents on the Chinese-Japanese war.

A note handed to Belgian Ambassador Baron Albert de Bassompierre declared the conference was inspired by the League of Nations and would "put serious obstacles in the path of the just and proper solution" of the conflict.

(The Belgian foreign office announced yesterday in Brussels that the opening of the nine-power pact consultations had been postponed from next Saturday to next Tuesday.)

Shortly before delivery of the note to the Belgian envoy, Japanese Foreign Minister Koki Hirota received imperial approval for the reply.

Claims Self-Defense
The Japanese foreign office simultaneously released a long informal statement reiterating Japan's contention that Japan was fighting in self-defense.

The statement asserted the nine-power treaty was obsolete because of what it termed infiltration of communism in China and declared "the Japanese nation, rising as one man, is united in a determination to surmount all obstacles for the self-defense."

Duke Is Coming to U. S. as Observer, He Tells Reporters

Paris (U)—The duke of Windsor, in his first public speech since his radio farewell to the empire after abdication last December, announced today he was going to America as a "completely independent observer, without political consideration," but that he hoped to aid in "solving some of the vital problems that beset the world today."

The duke addressed a meeting of the Anglo-American Press association.

The duke, addressing more than 100 English and American correspondents, said:

"I am now a very happy married man, but my wife and I are neither content nor willing to lead a purely inactive life of leisure."

After the luncheon, the former British king said he was sailing for the United States aboard the Bremen on Nov. 6.

2 Killed, 12 Hurt In Minneapolis Building Tragedy

Several Other Persons Missing When Second Floor Collapses

Minneapolis (U)—Two persons were killed, 12 others were injured and several still were missing today three hours after the second floor of the three-story brick building housing the Morris Fruit company collapsed.

The crash occurred shortly after 9 a. m.

The first victim, a woman, who had not been identified, was believed to be a switchboard operator. The body of Max Zelickson, 32, Minneapolis, a salesman, was dragged from the debris shortly before noon, bringing the death toll to at least 2.

Tons of debris buried office and warehouse workers in a mass of tangled debris and plaster. The injured employees suffered lacerations and bruises. A policeman suffered a smashed finger during the rescue work.

Because of the large amount of debris piled in the basement, police and fire officials said the number of dead could not be accurately ascertained until the debris had been entirely cleared.

Hear Explosion
Some of the witnesses said a loud explosion was heard just before the second floor dropped down, plummeling cases of oranges and gingerale through to the first floor.

I. Borovsky, an insurance man, was standing in the street in front of the building when the crash occurred.

"There was a terrific noise just like thunder," he said. "It sounded like a dam that had just been blown. Then the debris began falling and great clouds of dust arose. I could plainly hear the screams of men and women above the sound of the falling timber."

David Bonnick, owner of the fruit company, told police 11 persons were working in the office on the balcony of the second floor when the crash came.

Rescuers were jeopardized by a huge steel safe which hung precariously from the third floor. A squad of workers labored to secure the safe with ropes to prevent it from falling into the basement.

Boys Save Mother From Gas-Filled Racine Home
Racine (U)—Decisive action by John Fiezel, 9, probably saved his mother's life yesterday.

John came home from school to find his mother, Mrs. Alta Fiezel, lying unconscious on the kitchen floor in a gas-filled house. The boy broke several windows and opened the doors. Together with his brother Charles, 13, he dragged his mother outdoors, then summoned a fire department rescue squad which revived Mrs. Fiezel.

Police said the woman was baking when the gas stove's flame went out.

Madison (U)—Franz Dykstra, 16, son of President Clarence A. Dykstra of the University of Wisconsin, was arrested last night on charges of speeding and driving a car without a license.

Young Dykstra failed to appear in superior court for arraignment today, forfeiting bail of $10 on the speeding charge and $1 on the charge of driving without a license.

Soviet Union May be Left Out of Accord

Other Powers Seek Agreement on Spanish Volunteer Question

O. K. BRITISH PLAN
Still Hopeful Moscow Will Join in Supporting Program

London (U)—Movement gathering force among other powers to reach some sort of agreement on Spain's foreign troops — with or without Russia — threatened today to leave the Soviet Union out in the non-intervention cold.

All other participating nations agreed last night to the British proposal specifying that belligerent rights be granted to both the Spanish government and insurgents when "substantial progress" has been made in withdrawing alien warriors from the civil conflict.

When the diplomats resume their bickering Friday, it was expected they would reach an agreement on a withdrawal plan including Moscow if possible, but without her if the Soviet Union would not come in.

Informed sources said Italy had been persuaded to withdraw her flat refusal to be bound in advance by neutrality determine figures on foreign troops in Spain, but Italian quarters said no such agreement would be made until the personnel and duties of the investigating commission had been determined.

Need Soviet Support
It was obvious that any plan, without Soviet adherence, would be very risky. Because there are numerous Russian soldiers in Spain on the side of the Valencia government, it seemed incredible that Italy and Germany would withdraw their aid from the insurgents without similar action on the other side.

The 27 European nations bound in the neutrality accord studied the withdrawal plan in private calm today where members of their nine-power subcommittee yesterday sent five wrangling hours — the delegates of four nations at one time all talking at once and in four different languages.

The fact that instructions had been given toward the preliminary work of drafting commissions for the inquiry in Spain indicated that the others might go ahead without Russia.

The stumbling block now is agreement on what stage of the withdrawal belligerent rights should be granted. Russia's delegate, Ivan Matsky, insisted that the "bulk" of foreigners must leave Spain before Moscow would agree.

Californian Held in Slaying of His Wife

Los Angeles (U)—Police jailed Nelson D. Boyer, 21, on suspicion of murder today and claimed he confessed killing his wife, twice his age, and hiding her body five days before burying it in a two-foot grave in a vacant lot.

Police Chief Willard Bretz of suburban South Gate said the former magazine confessed slaying Dorothy D. Boyer, 42, because "she wouldn't divorce me or let me divorce her."

Chief Bretz said Boyer confessed that he kept his wife's body in their home two days. Then he took it to a nearby garage, trussed it with rope, wrapped it in newspapers, and hid it in a closet about the head and crammed it into an old trunk.

Three days later, under cover of night, he drove to the vacant lot, scooped out a shallow grave and buried the body.

Enters Insanity Plea In Fatal Stabbing Case
Racine (U)—A plea of innocent by reason of insanity was entered today by Frank E. Perlberg, factory worker, when arraigned before Circuit Judge E. B. Belden on a charge of first degree murder in connection with the fatal stabbing of Joseph Poplawski, 42.

Judge Belden appointed three alienists to examine Perlberg. District Attorney Oscar M. Edwards said Perlberg admitted stabbing Poplawski while the two were working at the Earl Aber Manufacturing company.

The district attorney said he believed Perlberg labored under the impression he had suffered some "imagined wrong."

CIO Spurns Federation Counter-Proposal for Peace in Labor Ranks

New Hands at Helm of Great United States Steel Empire

Stettinius is now chairman of the finance committee, and Fairless is president of the corporation's principal subsidiary, Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corp.

Edward R. Stettinius, Jr., 38-year-old son of a Morgan partner, and Benjamin F. Fairless, 47-year-old son of a coal miner, are taking over the chairmanship and the presidency of the two-billion-dollar enterprise, employing directly a quarter million people.

They were definitely assigned to their new posts at yesterday's meeting of the board of directors, at which two 63-year-old titans of steel prepared to retire to less onerous duties.

Myron C. Taylor, present chairman, said he would not serve again when his term expires next April 4, and it was announced that Stettinius would take his place. The directors also chose Fairless to succeed William A. Irvin as president, effective Jan. 1.

Despite its climactic flavor, the board's announcement was regarded as wholly in line with a program conceived by Taylor shortly after J. P. Morgan persuaded him to emerge from retirement and take a hand in the management of the steel industry's largest unit in 1925.

Simplification of the capital structure, closer integration of plant operations and a "revitalization" of the internal organization through infusion of new and younger blood were the three "facets" of the task Taylor wished to accomplish before relinquishing the reins.

With this done he will assume a less active role as a director and member of the finance committee and Irvin will serve as vice chairman of the board.

Rounding out the drama of personalities, the board declared a dividend on the common stock for the first time in five and a half years. A payment of $1 was ordered in token of the large profits made during the first nine months of the year, although the action coincided with a sharp lull in steel demand and an operating rate of around 54 per cent of capacity as against 80 or higher earlier in the year.

A statement for the quarter ended Sept. 30 showed net income of $30,617,538, equal to $2.79 a share on the common, compared with $36,173,822 for the June quarter, or $3.43 a share, and $15,636,177 or $4.34 a share.

Believes Poison Crippled Witness

Defense Fails to Shake Testimony of Physician in Hahn Case

Cincinnati (U)—Defense cross examination in the murder trial of Anna Marie Hahn failed today to shake testimony of Dr. George Altemeyer that George Heis, 62, "probably" was crippled by a poison which the state claims was administered by Mrs. Hahn.

Prosecutor Dudley Miller Outcall contends Heis, a former coal dealer, is "Mrs. Hahn's only living witness of a plot to slay for gain."

The woman is charged with first degree murder in the death of 78-year-old Jacob Wagner, who the state claims was poisoned.

Chief Defense Counsel Joseph H. Hoodin suggested alcoholism, sleeping powders, or a solution used in washing beer bottles as possible causes of Heis' illness, but the man's physician insisted that "from clinical symptoms" the theory of metallic poisoning was sustained.

Heis testified yesterday from a wheeled chair placed directly in front of the jury of eleven women and one man.

Heis testified that before the blonde German immigrant brought him food at his home in September, 1936, he was a "healthy man," doing a hard day's work at his coal business.

"I got sick every time after I ate meals with her," he testified. One month after the acquaintance developed Heis said he was confined to bed, "my throat dry, my stomach raw."

Heis related he gave Mrs. Hahn money in amounts ranging from $50 to $200 when she asked for funds to "pay inheritance tax on Hungarian bonds" to pay "state and American" taxes on a $7,000 trust fund, and on promises of gifts of stock.

Murray Says Plan Would Mean 'Abject Surrender'

ADJOURN TO NOV. 4

Federation Asks Immediate Dissolution Of CIO

Washington (U)—Labor's peace conference recessed today until Nov. 4 after each side had turned down the other's peace proposal.

Harvey Fremming, one of the CIO organization negotiators said the recess was "in no way considered a permanent disagreement."

He said the American Federation of Labor's three-man delegation had "learned some things they didn't know before" and added that the conference broke up because "we all had a lot of other things to do."

Joseph Curran, national maritime union president, and another CIO negotiator, emerged from the conference room in an apparent good humor and said:

"Well, now, we have got to go up and elect Mayor LaGuardia (of New York)."

The CIO had turned down the A. F. of L. peace proposal earlier. "The proposal suggests abject surrender," Philip Murray, chairman of the CIO peace committee, said in a statement issued two hours after the CIO's rejection of the A. F. of L. proposal.

Murray said the CIO unions had called for the CIO unions which originally were affiliated with the A. F. of L. to "desert and betray the 23 new national and international unions that have joined the CIO since its formation two years ago."

Murray also described the federation's offer as "merely a reaffirmation of its former policy and certainly it does not contemplate the organization of the unorganized into strong unions."

Sees Principle Rejected
"Their proposal, as we understand it, constitutes a rejection of the principle of industrial organization to protect production and other basic industries," Murray added.

"It has been clearly demonstrated by the Committee for Industrial Organization that the mass production and other basic industries must be organized on industrial lines."

"The A. F. of L. is still determined to prevent such organization, even though it may prevent the organization of the millions of unorganized workers in such industries."

The CIO's rejection of the A. F. of L. proposal, the latter made as the meeting opened today, left the peace conference in the air, with delegates undecided immediately whether it would continue.

The federation's three-man committee, headed by George M. Harrison, president of the Railway Clerks, submitted that organization's proposal to a peace conference this morning.

It came as a counter suggestion to the CIO proposal of yesterday for establishment of an autonomous CIO department in the A. F. of L. Federation Proposal

The A. F. of L. proposal called for:

1. Return to the federation of all CIO unions that once were A. F. of L. members in good standing.
2. Conferences between all other CIO unions and the corresponding unions in the federation to try to work out a program for bringing the new CIO unions into the federation upon mutually agreeable terms.
3. Settlement of all outstanding differences at the next A. F. of L. convention.
4. Immediate dissolution of the CIO.

11 Bodies Brought Out of Mine; Fear 3 Others Perished

Anchorage, Alaska (U)—The bodies of 11 miners killed in an explosion in the Evan Jones Coal mine were brought here today, and officials expressed a fear three others had perished.

Six bodies were found shortly after the unexpected blast ripped through the mine yesterday, and five were removed during the night.

Four of the 19 men in the mine at the time of the explosion yesterday fled unharmed as the tunnel crumbled behind them. A fifth, Vic Rade, foreman, was brought out by rescuers. He was seriously burned and one leg was hurt.

Z. L. Lousace, vice president of the mine company, held little hope any would be found alive.

Lousace said he did not know what caused the explosion.

Drs. A. S. Walkowski and Howland C. Romick sped to the scene from Anchorage in a special speeder provided by the Alaska railroad.

Lousace said a list of the victims would not be available until late today.

Hooray for the National Dish

Equal pie slices are assured by a new style of pan that has gun-sights along the edge to give exact aim to the wielder of the knife. Him, we yield to no one in our admiration of the French republic's motto "Liberty, Equality, Fraternity." But when there is pie on the table all we want is plenty of liberty and no equality at all. As for fraternity, we get that from the Post-Crescent classified want-ads. They do business in a brotherly way. That's why this one did so well.

Hoover Demands National Party Convention to Map Out 'Positive Principles'

Would End 'Destructive Policies'; Doesn't 'Want Any Public Office'

Boston—(P)—The Republican party had a fresh demand today from Herbert Hoover for a national convention to draft a new platform of "positive and affirmative principles."

"There is a mighty service to be performed," the former president told the Republican club of Massachusetts last night.

"This party must make the humanitarian objectives of the nation possible which are otherwise wrecked by wrongful and ineffective methods. It must reform destructive economic policies which undermine the standards of living of the economic middle class, and thus of all the people."

In an address halted so frequently by applause that he was compelled to bid his radio audience goodbye before he reached the end of his speech, Hoover declared: "The interest of the nation requires that the Republican party should provide the country with positive and affirmative principles that will meet these yearnings of the people today for a way out and forward. It is a gigantic task. But why should we not make a beginning?"

Warns Against Delay
The former president inserted into his prepared address an admonition against delaying the declaration of principles until 1940.

"I should be shocked," he said, "that a national convention is busy chiefly with selecting a candidate. You cannot send 48 men and women into a room at 9:30 at night and tell them to draft a platform before 9:30 in the morning and expect to obtain a satisfactory result. Particularly is this so when the platform drafters are besieged by lobbyists from the corridors outside."

"What I want is an intellectual session of the party."

The former president told his party that if it "has not learned the lesson that it must produce principles and program besides being against and joy-riding on mistakes it has not reached the inevitable day of disillusionment comes to them."

"You do not long hold the goal and devotion of men and women without definite purpose and principle," he said. "The Whig party tried all that."

Not a Candidate

Early in his speech Hoover brought a stir from the audience when he said, "I do not want any public office," followed by applause when he added "I shall keep on fighting for those things vital to the American people."

"I am not concerned over details. I am deeply concerned that people who are losing their way shall be given a banner of moral and intellectual leadership around which they rally as the inevitable day of disillusionment comes to them," he said.

He divided national issues into five categories.

"The first," he said, "are issues of moral integrity in government. The second are the vital issues of personal liberty and its safeguards. The third are those financial and economic policies which affect the standards of living of the people. The fourth are the humane issues of security and aid for the less fortunate. The fifth are our relations to other nations."

Want 'Reorient' Party

He declared "the time has come when the Republican party should be reoriented to these fundamental issues."

Listing points the proposed declaration of principles might cover, the former president asserted: "The Republican party can declare the principles of free enterprise regulated to prevent abuse and it can set these principles against all forms of collectivism."

"It can declare the principles for cure of abuse which will not shake the enterprise and initiative of men."

"It can declare the principles upon which alone a progressive economic system can produce increasing standards of living and security."

It can declare the principles that will emancipate the American people from the collectivism which has already crept over us."

"It can propose the principles of justice that will stamp out the fires of hate and cure the wounds of class conflict."

"It can declare its convictions on the rights and responsibilities of the government. That is the spirit of constitutional government. In these tumultuous times it can hold every assault on human liberty."

Governor Is Termed 'Impudent Dictator'

Milwaukee—(P)—Governor Philip LaFollette was called a "bold and impudent dictator" in an address before the Milwaukee County League of Women Voters last night by Martin J. Gilman of New York, a former Racine, Wis. resident.

Gilman, a lawyer and industrialist, said LaFollette "challenges the intelligence of men and women of Wisconsin." He advocated a Wisconsin Republican-Democratic coalition, under that name, and a $45,000 fund to be raised by state industries for the purpose of studying taxation and capital-labor relations.

"The man to direct the study," Gilman said, was Dr. Clarence A. Dyckstra, president of the University of Wisconsin.

craft and artillery, for a major drive on Madrid tomorrow. (A dispatch reaching Hendaye, France, from the insurgent base at Burgos said Franco's observers reported "a number of white flags and red and gold (insurgent) banners flying from rooftops inside Madrid.")

The report recalled methods used last week in the fall of Gijon by insurgent sympathizers to signal capitulation to the insurgent of resistance in the northwest.

(Insurgent) advisers also said the Burgos headquarters had been notified that a "considerable number of persons" were leaving Madrid and crossing the nearly year-old siege lines into Franco's territory.

(War communiques from both insurgents and the government cited scattered engagements on various fronts but said the activity was confined mostly to artillery duels. Both sides reported fighting in the University City sector, on the northern edge of Madrid.)

cents a share in the September quarter of 1936. For the first nine months net income was $95,352,853, equal to $8.71 a common share, against $28,574,904, or $1.26 a share last year.

Despite their comparative youth, both Stettinius and Fairless are seasoned men of steel. Stettinius, looking as young as his years in spite of prematurely gray hair, had a broad course of training in corporate affairs before he joined "Big Steel" as vice chairman of the finance committee in 1934.

Educated at the University of Virginia, he started his business career in 1924 with a subsidiary of General Motors Corp. Two years later

American Cheese Production Drops In Badger State

Output Also Sharply Lower Than in September Of Last Year

Chicago—(P)—Wisconsin production of American cheese declined 14 1/2 per cent in September from August and was 18 1/2 per cent smaller than in September, 1936, the Chicago Federal Reserve bank's division of research and statistics reported today.

The output was 6 per cent less than 1927-36 average for the month. "Distribution of the commodity from primary markets of the state receded only 3 per cent from August," the report said, "totaling 33 1/2 per cent heavier than for last September and 1 1/2 per cent above the 10-year average."

Total inventories of cheese in the United States decreased considerably on Oct. 1 by 4,882,000 pounds from a month earlier, to a level only 6 1/2 per cent above the 1932-36 average for the date. Quotations rose further during September and in the first three weeks of October.

Butter Production Down
The report said creamery butter production in the seventh federal reserve district (Wisconsin, Michigan, Iowa, Illinois and Indiana) declined 16 per cent from August, 96 per cent from a year earlier, and 14 1/2 per cent from the 10-year average.

"On the other hand," the report continued, "the tonnage sold not only exceeded current production but was 18 per cent greater than above the 1927-36 September average, although it showed a recession of 3 per cent from August."

"Production of the commodity in the United States likewise decreased from a month earlier but approximated that of a year ago as well as the seasonal average."

"Inventories of creamery butter in the United States fell off more than usually on Oct. 1 to a level 10 1/2 million pounds below the 1932-36 average for the date."

"Prices advanced in September over August, showed further strength during the first half of October, and then eased slightly in the third week of the month."

It is planned to show the motion pictures at Edw. Mason school Tuesday evening for the public and Wednesday afternoon for classes at the high school.

Flashes of Life

By the Associated Press
Orleans, Ind.—Harvesting one tree in R. A. Troth's orchard turned out to be quite a job.

He started the tree as a seedling because he "wanted to see how far a grower could go in grafting."

Now, he says, he has almost finished getting from the tree 70 varieties of apples, 5 of pears and 3 of crab-apples.

New York—The harvest season is over in the heart of Manhattan, where "the highest corn in the country" grew this summer.

In Mrs. Regina Jais's sky garden, up among the city's towers, the corn had a 17-story start on the tall corn of Iowa and Nebraska, and today Mrs. Jais counted the yield of her penthouse terrace: 40 ears of corn; several crops of string beans and tomatoes; some parsley, herbs, peas, peppermint—and even wild strawberries.

Her real business is writing books.

ing Kin Hana's roadhouse of $700 back in 1930, when he was known as Laverne Moore. "There's no place I would like better to make my home than in California."

"Just say I am the happiest man in the world," he told interviewers. Only a few hours before, a jury of 12 manual laborers walked into a jammed little, old-fashioned courtroom and handed down the verdict:

"We find the defendant not guilty of first degree robbery."

The spectators jumped to their feet and cheered lustily; Montague was all smiles.

But elderly, Presiding County Judge Harry E. Owen banged his gavel, ordered the spectators out of the aisles and looked sternly at the verdict.

"Gentlemen, this verdict is not in accord with what I think you should have returned. That, however is up to you."

It took the jury four and one-half hours to reach its verdict. On the first ballot, a member said, the jury stood 7 to 5 for acquittal; then 10 to 2 and finally 11 to 1 with a plumber foreman, Edward Blanchard, the last to hold out for conviction.

Favor Police Broadcast System for 8 Counties

Stevens Point—(P)—Establishment of a central police radio broadcasting system to serve eight counties in this area was approved at a meeting here yesterday.

Representatives of Portage, Waushara, Waupaca, Wood, Marathon, Clark, Lincoln and Taylor counties were present.

It was proposed that the old WLWL transmitter at Stevens Point be equipped for short-wave broadcasting to receiving sets installed in police and sheriff's offices and patrol cars in the participating counties.

The cost of equipping and operating WLWL for a year was estimated at $14,000. The expense would be pro-rated among the counties on the basis of assessed valuation of property.

Delegates to the meeting are to recommend to their county boards next month that they vote to participate.

Mason Reelected Milk Association Head at Meeting

Cooperative Group Holds State Convention at Clintonville

Melvin Mason, Whitewater, was reelected president of the Pure Milk Product Cooperative association at its state convention held at the Clintonville armory yesterday. C. F. Rogers, New London, was named vice president, R. C. Schultz, Nichols, secretary, and Tom O'Connor, Clintonville, reelected treasurer.

About 200 persons attended the convention which opened with sessions in the morning, continued in the afternoon and closed with a banquet at night at which Judge Henry Grass of Green Bay was the principal speaker.

Milo Swanton, executive secretary of the Wisconsin Council of Agriculture, Wilbur Carlson of the state department of agriculture, and H. D. Allenbach, Chicago, field man for the National Producers' Committee on Evaporated Milk, spoke at convention sessions. Mayor A. A. Washburn of Clintonville welcomed delegates at the opening session.

Besides selecting new officers, the delegates named Edward Featherstone, Walworth, and Fred Smood, Poyippi, to the executive board and elected the following men to the board of directors: William Bauman, Middleton, Chris Kuehne, Stanley, Bert Mitchell, Merrill, John Hesky, Belleville, Andrew Goetsch, Adell, Theodore Dimka, Junction City, E. F. Regan, Lodi, Clarence Luebke, Weyauwega.

Speaking on "Why Men Fail," Judge Grass pointed to the youth of the average criminal of today and traced the waywardness directly to a shapeless home life. The average age of a criminal 25 years ago was 25 to 35 years, the judge said. Today it is from 16 to 25 years. He praised the Boy Scout movement as a great strengthening influence on the young men of the nation.

Judge Grass was introduced by Max Stieg, district Boy scout chairman, who was toastmaster at the banquet.

Landon Conference and Hoover Speech Suggest Party Convention in 1938

Washington—(P)—Two developments caused persons in touch with the Republican national committee to predict today that it will sponsor a mid-term party convention early in 1938:

1. Former President Hoover devoted much of his speech in Boston last night to arguments in support of such a conference, which he said should adopt "positive and affirmative principles."

2. Alf M. Landon, 1936 Republican presidential nominee, conferred yesterday with National Chairman John Hamilton over methods of selecting delegates if a convention is approved by the committee at a special meeting Nov. 5.

There have been reports that Landon was not enthusiastic over the convention idea. Nevertheless the fact that he and Hamilton discussed such details as delegates led many followers of the situation to assume he believes a national meeting will be held.

Landon issued a statement saying: "We are particularly concerned that if the national committee should decide to hold a convention that the rank and file of the party should be represented in the deliberations, as well as in the consideration of any report on behalf of the policy committee."

(Advocates of the convention have suggested that a policy committee of party leaders should first draft a tentative set of principles.)

Both Landon's statement and Hoover's speech advised that the Republican party appeal to all opponents of the Roosevelt administration. Hoover used the suggestion of a coalition, previously advanced also by Senator Vandenberg of Michigan, as another argument for a national convention.

"People fuse or coalesce around ideas and ideals," he said, "not around political bargains or stratagems."

Landon said that whatever may be done along the lines of a policy committee or convention "should be to the end that it will afford an opportunity of expression for all groups in opposition to the administration."

Some critics of the convention proposal have expressed concern lest it might further individual candidacies for the 1940 presidential nomination.

Hoover referred to that argument in a preface to declaring, "I do not want any public office." His statement started immediate political discussion somewhat like that aroused by Calvin Coolidge's famous "I do not choose to run" statement in 1927.

Court of Honor, Parents' Night At Clintonville

Large Number of Awards
Made at Boy Scout
Meeting in City Hall

Clintonville — A court of honor and parents' night was observed Monday evening by Boy Scout Troop No. 23 of this city at the city hall. This troop, which is sponsored by a group of citizens, now has 38 members and is under the leadership of Lloyd Pinkowsky, scoutmaster, Edwin Karczewski and Ted Joswiak, assistant scoutmasters. The two latter were in charge of the program on Monday evening.

A large number of awards were made by the court of honor committee, which includes Floyd Hurley, chairman; John Tanty, Clarence Zachow, August Pinkowsky, Max Stieg, T. A. Patterson and John Buehrens, district commissioner. William Stieg and Harold Oik, Jr., received first class badges, and second class awards were given to Billy Ruiseh, Edward Gehrike, Glenn Krause, Boone Miller, James Oik and Francis Duetten. Tenderfoot scout admitted to the troop are Billy Holms, Ralf Lendved, Howard Kort and Myril Korb. Special merit badges were awarded to Billy Stieg and Harold Oik for swimming, while Howard Bovee, Jr., received them for zoology, botany, camping and cooking.

Besides the presentation of badges, a the program included a talk by E. E. Thomas of Appleton, district commissioner of the Valley Council, who described the national Boy Scout jamboree held last summer at Washington, D. C., at which 28,000 Boy Scouts were encamped. Mr. Thomas was in charge of the Valley Council scouts at the jamboree. Those from Clintonville who attended were Ivan Nordstrand of Troop 28, Harold and James Oik of Troop 23.

Musical selections on the guitar and violin were contributed by Cyril Downham and Warren Snider, while impersonations of well known men were given by Tom Hurley and Boone Miller. Stunts and scout songs completed the evening's entertainment.

A farewell party for Miss Alice Faust, librarian at the Clintonville public library, was given by members of the Book Review club Monday evening at the home of Mrs. Fred Holmes. The affair was in the form of a Halloween party. The program included a review of "The Education of Hyman Kaplan" by Leonard Q. Ross given by Mrs. Irving Auld, and the second lesson on Paintings and Etchings in charge of Mrs. Norman Hanson. She talked on the life and works of two American painters, Gilbert Stewart and John Singleton Copeley.

Contests provided amusement, the prizes being won by Mrs. Roy Martin, Mrs. Auld and Mrs. J. B. Nims. The program was followed by the serving of refreshments. A gift was presented to Miss Faust, who was instrumental in organizing the club here last winter. Miss Faust, who has been in charge of the local library since July 1, 1936, will leave Nov. 1 to accept a position in the library at Davenport, Iowa. Her parents reside at Cedar Falls, Iowa.

Goering Sees Support

Forecast 22,000 Gain In Outagamie County's Population in 23 Years

BY JOHN W. WYNGAARD

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau
Madison—Official prophets of the state government, crystal gazing with the help of census figures and scientific methods of statistical analysis, took a look into the future this week and predicted a rosy period of continued and prosperous development for Appleton and Outagamie county, and the whole Fox river valley from Oshkosh to Green Bay.

In a monumental study just off the press this week, the Wisconsin State Planning board analyzes Wisconsin's population growth, and on the basis of the past, essays to predict what will happen in the future. The population of Outagamie county, they found, is due for a sharp increase by 1960. In the next 23 years it will increase by 21,988 persons, or 35 per cent, and in rate of growth will rank seventh in the state, leading 64 others, and ranking beneath only Milwaukee, Racine, LaCrosse, Dane, Brown and Rock counties.

And the city of Appleton is also due for a period of healthy expansion, the board's published forecast declares. Population of the city by 1960, according to the expected natural growth and an adjustment for migration, will be 32,710.

Here is how the statisticians have it figured out: 1930 population, 23,267; 1940, 27,270; 1950, 29,280; 1960, 32,710, adjusted for migration, 30,960.

The anticipated rapid, but steady, growth in Outagamie county and Appleton, the board attributes to the high degree of industrialization in that region, and in the entire Fox river valley.

Industrial Centers Grow
Future population growth, the planning board said, because maximum land utilization in the state has already been accomplished, will probably be in the industrial communities and will be confined to the older age groups.

Outagamie county lies within the prosperous eastern district of the state, prosperous because of the combined favorable development of agriculture and industry, and which includes also Calumet, Door, Fond du Lac, Kewaunee, Manitowish, Brown, Oshkosh, Sheboygan, Washington and Winnebago counties.

That area, the board points out, has had a continuous development and increases in population since the early days of the state, and will increase in population more than 18 per cent by 1960.

Outside of the Milwaukee metropolitan area, board charts show, the Fox river valley area is the most densely populated in the state, and other cities in the valley, including Fond du Lac, Oshkosh, and Green Bay, are due for a growth similar to that expected for Appleton. Present population in the immediate valley area, the board reveals, is more than 257 per square mile, while the state average is only about 53 persons per square mile.

Of the purpose of its exhaustive study the board said:

Aid for Future Planning
"The significance of population inquiries lies, not only in the clarification of the interplay between social and economic development in the past, but also in the utilization of this interplay in looking and planning ahead."

"Present day public works enterprises which involve the construction of schools, public buildings and highways, plans concerning park and recreational area developments, better land use, zoning and social welfare, when undertaken and completed, will serve the future as well as the present population."

The board's experts admitted the difficulties innate in population forecasts, but commented: "While it is difficult to forecast probable future migration because of the many social and economic implications, it is fairly simple to forecast the probable natural increase. It is fair to assume from observations already made that the role of migration in the future population growth of Wisconsin will be less and less important."

"Rural-urban migration within the state will probably continue, although with less intensity and the interstate migration will be more or less balanced by foreign immigration."

"For the state as a whole, therefore, future population growth will be almost exclusively determined by natural growth," the board concluded.

In Upper Age Groups
The board pointed out that by 1960 Wisconsin will have slightly more than 3,500,000 people, or an anticipated natural increase of about 570,000 persons. And very significant in this growth, the experts wrote, "is the seemingly continuous ageing of the Wisconsin population. The age composition of the 1960 population has a much older distribution. The estimated increase in the number of persons 45 or more years of age comprises 95 per cent of the total anticipated population increase, the younger and more productive age groups showing practically no increase."

And this, the board continues, "points significantly to the approaching population stability in Wisconsin."

Outagamie county, although its prospects are brighter, is not alone in the ability to contemplate a pleasant future of growth for at least two and one half decades. Other counties in the Appleton area are also slated for population growths, the board found.

Among them are Brown, which will increase in population a little more than 33 per cent by 1960; Manitowish, 8 per cent; Waupaca, 19 per cent; Door, 18 per cent; Shawano, 9 per cent; Winnebago, 22 per cent. A darker picture is drawn for 26 other counties, many of them in the region of poor lands in central Wisconsin, or in the impoverished cut-over regions of northern Wisconsin. These counties will lose some of their population during the next 23 years, the board's forecast says. Among them is Calumet, which will drop a little more than 1 per cent.

The continuous development of the state of Wisconsin, from its earliest days when it consisted of scattering settlements of agricultural minded European immigrants, to its present day position, was made possible by the tremendous growth in industry during the last few decades, the planning board observed.

When industrial centers began to develop, they "caused a change in the direction of population movement. The characteristically rural spread of the eighties and nineties contracted to form the clusters that have become more typical of urban and industrial growth."

Through all this, "there is a very positive population movement, a continuous shifting and realignment of people with new forms of economic expression." An even growth has changed to a growth "concentrated in selected areas or clusters, as predominance inland occupations has given way to predominance in industrial occupations," the board finished.

Today and Tomorrow

BY WALTER LIPPMAN

Where are We and What Must We Do?

While it is clear enough that there are not the same dangers today as there were after the crash of 1929, it is none the less true that recovery has been halted and that a depression is in the making.

There is no reason for thinking that it must be as grave and as prolonged as the depression which ended in the winter of 1933. But there is also no reason for thinking that it cannot become serious indeed if its causes are not dealt with promptly, boldly, and clearly. If for the next three or four months we drift, we shall more than probably drift into as bad a depression as the excitedly pessimistic stock market is now predicting.

Halting of Recovery

Reflected in Market

My own picture of the present situation, arrived at after some inquiry and study, is in the broadest terms about as follows:

Though it was not clear to many of us while it was happening, it is now obvious that recovery reached its peak last winter—roughly between December and March. Since that time economic conditions have not been improving. They have been deteriorating. In the spring and summer they became worse, so gradually and imperceptibly at first that few observers realized what was happening. But by the end of August the halting of the recovery, the relapse into mild depression, and the fear of a bad depression, were reflected violently in the stock market.

Once again we have been reminded of the old saying that few people recognize a boom or a slump until six months after it has begun.

Government Actually Reducing Public Debt

The recovery which was halted last winter was stimulated to a high degree by the deliberately inflationary actions of the Federal government. The 1936 boom was financed by the cheap money policy of the Federal Reserve Board, by the soldiers' bonus, by the huge relief expenditures, and by the imports of foreign gold.

After the election and during the winter the Federal Reserve Board, the treasury, and the White House became properly and genuinely alarmed at the dangerously rapid rise in prices which threatened to produce an uncontrollable inflation. So they jammed on the brakes. They abolished the largest part of the excess reserves. They sterilized the foreign gold imports. And, though only a few experts seem as yet to realize it, they not only balanced the real Federal budget for this year, but actually created a situation in which the government is now taking more money from the people in taxes than it is spending.

I know that this is not the popular notion and until I had looked into the facts I had not realized it. But it is a fact. What has happened is that the Federal government and the states are collecting something over a billion dollars under the Social Security act, that this money is greater than the deficit, that the surplus is used to buy back the government's bonds, and that on net balance the government is actually reducing the national debt owed to the people.

Import On Business Was And Is Deflationary

Thus in its total impact on business the government is now and has been for some months deflationary. It was not only eminently proper but absolutely necessary that it should be. But—and this is the crux of the matter, I think—if the government through the Treasury and Federal Reserve Board was going to stop its contribution to the boom, the only way a depression could be avoided was to have spending through private capital investment replace the spending provoked by the soldiers' bonus and relief.

A year ago it looked as if private capital, stimulated by the prospect of profits, was going to do just that. But before private investment had really gotten very far, conditions were allowed to develop and measures were taken which checked investment abruptly and drastically. With the government no longer providing a stimulus to business, and with business failing to provide its own stimulus through private investment, the boom had to end and a depression had to begin.

Sees President's Stand As Factor in Problem

The causes of the present depression must, therefore, lie in the obstacles which have checked private spend a little more now or it should tax a little less.

But that will do no good whatever unless the difficult decision is taken simultaneously. That decision involves, to put it bluntly, reversing with whatever false-saving may be in order, the guiding principle of the New Deal. It will be necessary to discard the New Deal pincers. It will be necessary for Mr. Roosevelt to tell organized labor that certain wages, especially in the construction industry, are too high, and that certain hours are too short. And it will be necessary for him to satisfy investors that he has laid aside the purposes behind the attempt to pack the supreme court.

From such inquiries as I have made, I have no doubt that the leading New Dealers now realize that unless such a reversal takes place promptly they will find themselves in a depression which will destroy them and their political power. Their present problem is to persuade the president, who is only half persuaded, that he must act at once, and the problem of persuading him is how to devise a formula which will enable him to reverse his course without losing much face.

IT'S ODD But It's Science

BY HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE

AP Science Editor

New York—(A)—Man has entered there era of conurbations.

That's what Professor C. E. Fawcett, English geographer, calls the change which one century has made in city life. In 1901 London, he points out, with 550,000 inhabitants, was the only city which approached one million.

But today there are about 60 cities of a million or more population.

human population. That's conurbation. If it keeps up at the present rate, Professor Fawcett explains, in two or three generations, the majority of human beings would live in from 200 to 300 cities.

Conurbation is going on principally in western Europe, in the middle Atlantic states of the United States and in China along the lower Yangtze. Teeming India, says Professor Fawcett, has escaped the development.

Shiocton Trucker Seeks Motor Carrier License

Representatives of the state public service commission will conduct hearings in regard to contract motor carrier licenses at Green Bay on Nov. 3. One hearing concerns a Shiocton trucker. His application for a license is as follows:

Leonard Heinz, Shiocton, Outagamie county: 1. Milk from the towns of Bovino, Maine, Liberty, Maple Creek, Deer Creek and Elkhart, Outagamie county, to Shiocton; 2. farm products, except milk from above-named towns to markets within 35 miles of applicant's residence and supplies back to said towns; and 3. cheese from Shiocton to Green Bay and coal from Green Bay to the cheese factory at Shiocton.

A dozen of these exceed five millions each. In these 60 cities dwells one-twelfth of the earth's

Americans Pay Plenty For Sweepstake Tickets

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER

New York—The United States last week successfully defended her dubious honor as champion of the Irish hospitals sweep, contributing $7,000,000 more than half of the Cesarewitch pool, which fell just a little short of $13,500,000. The investment undoubtedly was much greater, because, invariably, a number of phony issues are sold to our gullibles and because, invariably, a portion of the genuine tickets retained here are duds whose owners do not get a run for their money. That happens when the agent decides to keep the purchase price of $2.50 for himself instead of remitting it to Dublin.

The agent is under a strong temptation to do this, because the victim, even if he is of a mind to have the law on the agent, cannot come into court with clean hands, being involved in an illegal transaction himself. Moreover, most Americans are unaware that the deal is incomplete unless they receive from the Irish Hospitals fund in Dublin, well in advance of the race, a formal receipt acknowledging that the agent has sent in the money and the stub. An agent who peddles 100 or 1,000 tickets for cash has only his conscience for a policeman to make him do the right thing, and most of his clients would not even know they had been swindled.

Up to 18 months ago the Irish Hospitals fund had reached $46,000,000, a little more than $15 for public hospitalization for every man, woman and child in the Irish Free State. President Eamon de Valera about that time, nevertheless, thought it best subject and may exaggerate the American capacity to absorb lottery tickets.

If It Paid Debt It Would Be Very Nice

It was his plan to take down 40 per cent of the gross for the government, which would mean that the people would have to buy $2,500,000,000 worth a year. That would come to about $43,000,000 a week—not too high a figure of itself. But, considering the competition of the slot machines, the horse tracks, the numbers racket and the inevitable rival, minor league lotteries which would be started by the states, counties and municipalities, Mr. Kenny had better not promise to stand on his head until the federal kiddy hits that billion should his bill become law.

Mr. Kenny certainly dreams a pretty dream, though, and far be it from these dispatches to roll a man over when he is tossing billions around in his mind. He told his colleagues that in 35 years his lottery would pay off the whole national debt to date—Wilson's debt, Mr. Big's debt and all—and that would be very nice indeed.

Congressman Kenny Wins Lottery Here
The honorable Edward A. Kenny, member of congress from New Jersey, has been active several years in the agitation to legalize a federal lottery here. Notwithstanding any suggestion which might be seen in his name, he deprecates the drift of American money to all foreign lotteries, including the Irish, which is the American favorite.

The German, French, Italian and Cuban lotteries receive small play from this country, but the Germans, French and Italians on their part, send practically nothing to Dublin. The Germans and Italians are not allowed to send money out of their countries, and the French just don't. Maybe the Cubans and other Latin Americans buy a few tickets, but, if so, not enough to raise them above the miscellaneous group of customers.

Mr. Kenny once startled his colleagues in congress with the assertion that New York city alone had bought $16,000,000 worth of tickets on a single pool of the Irish sweep and brought them up with their ears funneling when he declared that by his reckoning, as an expert on the subject, the United States treasury could clear a billion dollars a year with a federal lottery. He runs a very high fever on the

Large Supply of Fruit Likely to Bring Low Prices

Crops of This Year Near Record Proportions, Report Shows

With much larger than average fruit supplies in prospect for market during the winter months, prices throughout the winter marketing season are expected to be generally low, the bureau of agricultural economics said today in its October fruit situation report.

The current report discusses the supply and demand situation for the oranges, grapefruit and apples, the crops of which this year are of near record proportions. The prospective orange supply for winter and spring marketing is the largest on record; the grapefruit crop is indicated to be the second largest, exceeded only in 1936; and the apple crop is expected to be the largest in 11 years.

Though new-crop oranges are selling near the early prices of last year, the Bureau points out that "seasonal price declines during the next few months may be as sharp as those which occurred from October to January last season." Grapefruit prices declined more than usual during the past month and some further declines are likely during the next two months. The rate of the decline, however, is expected to be much less than during the past month.

It is probable, the report stated, that prices of eastern apples in terminal markets have passed the season's low point. Apples from the will be given Friday evening with members of the sixth, seventh and eighth grades taking part. The program will consist of a 1-act play, songs, monologues and poems.

As a language project, the seventh and eighth grades have edited a school newspaper entitled, "Elm Grove News". Christopher Wolf is editor-in-chief. Alice Huebner is assistant editor and reporters are Evelyn Callan, Adeline Kroeger, Adeline Lemke and Arnold Schultz. The staff will put out Christmas, spring and "close of school" numbers.

In connection with the study of the 13 colonies, pupils made charts which have been of help during reviews.

Hair stylists predict much more elaborate coiffures this winter. Elaborate curls, ornaments and even lacquered hair will be much in vogue.

A JURY CANNOT BE EVERYTHING

Early in this century a Chicago butcher named Lutger was on trial for his life for using the tools of his trade upon his wife. Probably fatigued by the length of the trial Mister Dooley wrote in his column:

"When the case is all over, the jury'll pitch th' testimony out iv the window, an' consider three questions: Did Lutger look as though he'd kill his wife? Did his wife look as though she ought to be killed? Isn't it time we went to supper?"

The verdict in the case of one of Kentucky's quick shooters named Garr will pile up further criticism on the jury system.

Often juries are lambasted for no other reason than a difference of opinion although in the Garr case the evidence was simply overwhelming that the Garrs planned the destruction of General Denhardt and have so far succeeded in evading punishment because jurors are satisfied that had Kentucky citizens been more patriotic the General would have been destroyed long before.

We must take the evil in the jury system along with good and not make too wry a face because, in fact, the good exceeds the evil.

It may be that General Denhardt was the ruthless and unscrupulous person painted. Perhaps he deserved to be shot down like an animal scurrying to cover. But the Garrs in taking justice into their own hands were committing an act of anarchy. The great danger lies in the substitution of individual judgments and caprices for the more steady and deliberate although sometimes slow and tiresome processes of the law.

If the Garrs made a mistake in their calculations, if the General were guiltless of wrongdoing, still must their defense be based upon an attack against the character of the deceased. And when a man is buried in a cemetery it is not difficult to attack his record.

Popularity, too, is a very fickle thing upon which to construct anything worth while. The Garrs were likeable and liked. Denhardt apparently was stern, morose and curt. Yet sometimes the greatest and most generous hearts beat warmly under a rough exterior, and many of those who literally carry their hearts on their sleeves are but superficial and undependable.

The jury knew well enough that the Garrs deliberately set out to kill Denhardt. They found a verdict of not guilty because they thought the Garrs were right or, if not entirely right, much might be said in their favor.

It was an extreme case, brothers avenging the destruction of an attractive sister, the playmate of their childhood. And hard cases like this sometimes create bad precedents.

The correct procedure was a verdict of guilty by the jury with a plea for leniency. The law did not give the jury the right to pardon. That right belongs to others although the jury in fact exercised it.

COFFEE AND COTTON DESTROYED WHEN NEEDED MOST

Our government has decreed a two million acre reduction in the cotton crop for next year.

About a month ago Brazil burned up hundreds of thousands of bags of coffee for the purpose of raising world prices, what might be called an old Brazilian custom in which everyone goes out on a coffee jag.

We are not trying to point at the fault for this double destruction of necessities either by fire or empty acres but it seems material to state that the cotton workers in our Southland could very nicely consume the Brazilian coffee that was destroyed, and that if the Brazilians put more cotton in their pants they wouldn't be stung by so many insects.

It is difficult to believe that such a situation is beyond remedy, particularly when the nations engaged are so close and friendly that we are leaning the South Americans part of our navy.

Coffee is a great food. Cotton is one of the world's staples. The millions of workers in the cotton fields would be much happier every day if they could have unlimited quantities of coffee instead of being forced by cruel necessity, including small cotton crops, to partake of substitutes, not always palatable.

And the Brazilian who likes brightly dyed cloth with which to adorn himself and ornament his home would assuredly have a much more restful and happy spirit had the coffee he raised and which was destroyed by fire been used to buy from our Southland the necessary cotton.

WORTHWHILE DELINQUENCY EFFORT

The distance separating Broadway and Main Street cannot be measured with the ordinary yardstick. New York City's problems are not the problems of the hinterland. But, occasionally, New Yorkers' attempts to solve their peculiar problems develop courses of action that can be followed with profit even in the smallest villages.

Such a course of action is growing out of the recognition by New York City school authorities of a condition that cheekmates many of their efforts to combat child delinquency.

The authorities have come to believe that their work with children never will succeed as it is intended to do while the social levels of the communities from which the children come remain below standard. The authorities are paying less attention to children and more attention to adults, are establishing social centers where adults and teachers can meet and are planning activities that are intended especially to arouse the interest of adults.

As was remarked before, New York's problems are not the problems we face. But we can study with profit the new methods of child correction that are being worked out there.

These methods do not contemplate the extension of the kind of work that the Parent-Teachers associations are doing. Delinquent children do not ordinarily come from the sort of homes that supply Parent-Teacher membership.

There is, however, opportunity for the education of parents that will be reflected in more normal home life. Children spend only a few hours in school each day. Education is not a part-time job. It must be spread over 24 hours. And any effort that results in the raising of the social level of the community is certain to be reflected in a decrease in delinquency.

WHAT'S THE MATTER WITH OUR LAWYERS?

Appleton, with the first electric street railway in the country and the first paper chemistry institute, is lagging sorely in the exposition of the New Deal Code of court procedure.

Long since we had expected, in printing proceedings of our municipal court, to record something like this:

Court: The warrant charges the accused with burglarizing a liquor store and holding up a gas station. Do you plead guilty or not guilty?

Accused: I am a liberal and have upheld the President even when it gave me a pain to do so.

Court: Mr. District Attorney, have you investigated this man's claim that his political record is all right?

District Attorney: I intercepted a rumor that he was going to plead as he has but have not finished my investigation to see whether it is accurate. Of course, if a man is really a pure yes—yes—liberal I realize that the seemingly anti-social conduct with which he is charged is immaterial.

Court: Oh, there can be no doubt about that. The rule now is perfectly clear and well settled. If the accused can establish that he is a pure yes—yes—liberal I must terminate the proceedings. That has been settled for all time by in re Black.

Opinions Of Others

DANGER SIGNALS

The chief of police of Bucharest has proposed that all pickpockets convicted of a second offense have their ears painted red. Our esteemed contemporary, the London Times, while pointing out that this is a more humane method of giving warning to the innocent bystander than that of cutting off the offenders' ears, objects that ears may be easily hid and suggests the nose. But as a red nose ought not to be taken as a mark of criminal character, the Times offers blue.

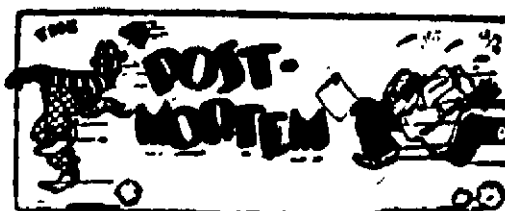

Yet blue is as faulty as red. It was the Los Angeles Times, instead of the London, we should suspect an insidious intent to advertise the climate, but there are days in London and even in Los Angeles when most of the population have blue noses.

However, there are other colors and this detail should not obscure the merit of the central idea. We pass it along to our lawmakers and the experts in criminal control who advise them. It has been obvious to any one who follows the administration of the law against criminals in these parts that the courts, the police, the parole boards, the prison officials are frequently if not usually blissfully unconscious of the past activities of the culprit before them, though he may have a record as long as his arm. Of course, we have records. The police attend to their own score pretty well, but other authorities seem rather often to be unaware of them. For years we have had a law imposing extra penalties on habitual criminals, but for years it was forgotten or ignored by prosecutors and courts. Perhaps the Bucharest police chief offers a helpful hint. If every habitual criminal bore a conspicuous mark of some well chosen kind, not only the peaceful citizen but the authorities charged with applying the law for his protection might be put on guard.—Chicago Tribune.

THIS is the time of year when, all of a sudden, the old bus that would look like new with a coat of polish and run like a top with a few new spark plugs and a little less carbon suddenly develops antiquity and asthmalike. There is no doubt about why all this happens, no doubt at all. It's because the new models are leering out of the automobile dealers' windows. . . . and when I say "leer," I mean exactly that. . . . and not only do they leer, but they also sniff disdainfully and they arch a headlight with a superciliousness that makes the old bus cringe with humiliation. . . . I have never seen inanimate objects display as much of human weaknesses as do the new cars and the old cars at this time of year. . . . and as for me? . . . well, I gaze sadly at the $138 in the checking account, pat the old wagon tenderly on the hood and say: "Gosh, pal, I hope you can make it through another winter!"

What the following contribution lacks in meter, it makes up for in its pointedness.

A WARNING

I would like to write a warning to every young person in the land. And hope they will impress it on their memories, to have it always on hand. It is nice to have fun; it adds a lot of happiness to our lives. Innocent fun, with a lot of laughter, is something on which everyone thrives.

But there is no real fun in anything that destroys our property or endangers lives. One can see no real fun in it, no matter how hard one strives. Why obtain it from acts that will cause people a lot of worry and work. Like smearing windows and floors with stuff hard to clean, if you are not a shrink?

Here is a true story of a milk man in an Ohio town. (1927 the year). Who was delivering milk at two o'clock a rainy morning without fear. Someone had stretched a wire across the walk, and caused him a terrible fall. Was that fun? I ask the culprit? Had it been himself, it would be no fun at all.

This bright 35-year old man broke 5 ribs and 2 vertebrae in that fall. And has never done a day's work since—cripple for life, that is all. He doesn't know the ones who caused his fall by committing that crime. But the wheels of justice grind daily and he may be known in time.

I wish this article could be printed in every paper in the land, before Halloween. So that those who go out on that night may have a record that is clean. Not daring anything that will be harmful, dangerous, destructive, or mean. By adhering to the above, all can have a record that is clean.

A Verse for Today

By Anne Campbell

PORTRAIT
 (For H. K.)

He sometimes worries that his tongue
 Twists the old words learned long ago.
 His songs are those that he has sung
 In a dim land he used to know.
 He scarcely can remember when
 He left his native soil to come
 Where thoughts of Freedom fired his pen,
 And in his heart beat Freedom's drum.

He thinks that he cannot express
 His thoughts in any graceful phrase.
 He does not count the friendliness.
 The kindly deeds that mark his days.
 If he should never speak at all.
 His acts, so generous and right,
 Would loom so large on Heaven's wall,

TIME FOR A REAL BREATHING SPELL

Personal Health Talks

BY WILLIAM BRADY, M. D.
 Noted Physician and Author

SURCEASE FROM XEROSIS

Dr. Webster says, and this time I agree, that xerosis (pronounced xer-oh-sis) is abnormal dryness, as of the skin or eyes. Xeroderma (pronounced xer-oh-derm-a) is a disease of the skin characterized by dryness and roughness and a fine scaly desquamation.

Xerosis or xeroderma refers to no specific skin disease, but to a common state of the skin associated with various specific diseases and a still more frequent complaint of individuals who have no definite deficiency or departure from optimal health. Thus xerosis is the salient feature of ichthyosis (fish skin disease, aligator hide) and of psoriasis. It occurs in most cases of chronic eczema. It is a normal evolutionary change in the skin of the aged. A young skin is soft, warm, moist or slightly greasy, smooth, clear; an old skin is harsh, cold, dry, perhaps inclined to crack or scale, rough, dull, sallow or gray. A bit of skin oil or precaution to prevent excessive dryness of the skin makes a lot of difference.

Diagnosis and treatment of various skin diseases is best left to the patient's own physician. Not that a physician has a specific remedy or treatment for each skin disease, but just that failure to apply rational treatment or ill-advised application of the wrong remedy may greatly aggravate or prolong the trouble.

Recipes or formulas here suggested are useful for the purpose of alleviating xerosis or xeroderma and may be indiscriminately employed for this purpose. They are not adequate treatment or remedies for skin diseases, however. A popular skin oil throat the world is cold cream, officially called unguentum Aquae Rosalae (ointment of rose water) or in France the Cerat cosmetique or Cernefroid. This is most satisfactory when freshly made up in reasonable quantity by the pharmacist after the standard formula in the Pharmacopoeia (U. S. or British). Here is approximately the Pharmacopoeia recipe for those who wish to prepare their own cold cream:

Pare into fine shavings one ounce of spermaceti and one ounce of white wax (beeswax bleached) and melt them together with moderate heat. Then add 5 ounces of expressed oil of almond. Now dissolve 20 grains of sodium borate (borax) in 11 ounces of stronger rose water and add this to the other mixture. Then stir rapidly and continuously, or beat with egg beater or with heavy spoon until the mixture becomes uniformly soft and creamy.

Cold cream thus freshly made, not when long stored or made of petroleum products, serves every purpose a cream, cerate or oil can serve in the cleansing, protection or beautifying of the skin. It relieves chapping, irritation, itching, sunburn. It helps to keep the skin young.

Your Birthday

"SCORPIO"
 If October 28 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 9:30 to 11:30 A. M.; from 1:30 to 3:30 P. M., and from 7:30 to 9:30 P. M. The danger periods are from 7:30 to 9:30 A. M.; from 5:30 to 7:30 P. M., and from 9:30 to 11:30 P. M.

There may exist, today, a great variety of opinion may be found this day in matters involving a decision on, or a selection of colors. Vanity perhaps will be responsible for many discordant conditions, as well as much dissatisfaction. Be careful that vanity does not spoil this day for you. You may have the opportunity to render a service that, in the long run, will benefit you financially, or advance your social interests. It will pay to do whatever you can to increase your popularity. Be cautious in the selection of words or phrases you use, for undefinable, idiomatic speech may be misinterpreted. Words uttered in anger this day are apt to be remembered a long time, so it will be good judgment to think twice before saying anything unkind. Married and engaged couples as well as those inclined to pledge their heart and hand, will be very foolish this day to make any promise which they do not intend to keep.

If a woman and October 28 is your birthday, you are probably a lover of peace, and are easily disturbed by any discordant condition. You are practical despite the fact that you have many ambitious dreams, and a vivid imagination. You may be very modest about your personal achievements, with the result that they do not gain the recognition they would, if you tooted your own horn discreetly. In a mistaken idea that it is charitable, you must never allow anyone to steal any credit that is rightfully yours. Journalism, art, social welfare or educational work, selling or professional entertaining may give you the opportunity you need to become a great success. Your married life is likely to be a continuous honeymoon.

The child born on October 28, from early childhood, most likely, will have retentive memory, plenty of ambition and an unusual amount of energy. If a man and October 28 is your natal day, you ought to have excellent taste, a deep appreciation of anything artistic, and a literary

Seen And Heard In New York

By HELEN MENKEN
 (Underlying George Tucker)

New York—Well, George, whether or not you're scampering away on a holiday, the show must go on. Although, frankly, I never could see just why! Suppose you had no column today? Suppose I made no broadcast, tonight? So what? But, anyway, that show - must - go - on - tradition is one held in common by you of the Fourth Estate and us of the theatre. I know you'd pin it. And I'm pretty sure, too, that you'd feel fluttering butterfly wings in your tummy when you turn actor, just as I do now in facing this Sahara of white paper which I must fill with words for you.

I don't see why we have to fib to each other, George. You know very well that you told me column writing was easy. You said: "All you do is put one little word after another until the space is filled." But you didn't tell me what words! However, I'll afraid that if it were my turn for a vacation, and I was persuading you to get up before the microphone and substitute for me as "Brenda" in "Her Second Husband," I'd tell you there was nothing to it except to speak one little word after another! So that makes us even.

Really, though, I don't feel so full of songs, dances and witty sayings today. You see the other evening I somehow lost a pretty valuable pin which also possesses great sentimental value for me. George, I've been wondering how in the world you ever became a columnist. And why. Won't you write a story about it one day? I became an actress "strictly from hunger." We were pretty poor. So I went to work when I was four. Believe it or not, I was a Shakespearean actress at four. I was "Mustard Seed" in "A Midsummer Night's Dream!"

But you know the way it is with we Shakespearean actors. We have to eat. So a season or so later I was in a more commercial theatre. I was a wave in the Hippodrome show. I was a sea spectacle, and I was one of the "actors" who ran up and down under the canvas waters to make wilting waves. They must certainly have been very sad sea waves! By the way, George, do you know that Eugene O'Neill also started his career as a wave? It was in "The Count of Monte Cristo," which his father owned and played for years.

I imagine that after your first few hundred columns you sort of got the hang of it. But after an actor's first few hundred portrayals of a part, it grows increasingly difficult. For that is the time when memory is likely to play you a dirty trick and completely erase all recollection of your lines.

I feel somewhat that way right now, George. So what say we call it a day, or a column, or something, and write "30" — "Three-oh" — "through!"

A Bystander In Washington

BY PRESTON GROVER

Washington — When archaeological experts begin digging around the ruins of Washington 10,000 years from now, they probably will find some bewildered tourist trying to pick his way out of the commerce department building.

You can wear yourself out walking from the patent office to the bureau of fisheries without ever once having passed the census bureau or the maritime commission. The place is full of dead ends and corridors leading off to the left; and if you enter from Pennsylvania avenue and try to get out again that way, but instead find yourself out on Constitution avenue two blocks away, don't be perturbed. You are lucky to get out before the week end.

Maiden Distress

Second only to the commerce building in complexity is the department of justice building. The best of the modern government murals are in the department of justice building—maybe we should say some of the best, for safety's sake. But it is not an insurable hazard to visit them with the idea of getting out before starving.

We met a girl and her escort who had entered to see the murals, but in trying to get out they had circled around and around in the corridors until they passed the same murals three different times.

We told them to go down a long corridor and go and go and go without a turn until they came to a blank wall, then to the right and take the elevator to the first floor and ask the policeman there how to make the rest of the way to the street.

Just for fun when we left the building we asked the policeman if a girl in a green knit dress had asked him how to get out, and he said no; so they may be wandering around yet, and that was days ago.

G-Men's Game

Some say that G-Man Hoover's agents practice getting each other lost in the building and bet times on who gets out fastest. That probably isn't so, but it gives you an idea.

The state department building looks tangled as everything from the outside, sort of like these houses made from 7,382 matches balanced on the tip of a beer bottle. Inside it is simple in design but has not the qualities of safety against fire that the newer labyrinths boast.

The basement is forever piled high with wooden packing cases in which documents are exchanged among the various legations and consulates. The building is of stone but it is much trimmed with wood. If a fire should start among the packing cases, a lot of foreign service documents would make one dramatic "pout."

However, the building has been there 40 years or more without a single burn out, and nobody seems to be especially afraid. There isn't a "no smoking allowed" sign in sight.

WAR BABY MYSTIFIES

All efforts to trace the parents of a war-baby girl living on the lonely Atlantic-swept island of Soay, one mile off Skye, Scotland, have failed. Brought from Flanders in 1916 she was given the name of Janet Blacklin, but even her foster father, Sandy Campbell, knows nothing of her family. His brother Kenneth brought her home from Belgium when he was on leave, saying she was the only one of a family to escape when a shell wrecked their home. Kenneth returned to the front and was killed. His mother cared for Janet until his death, then Sandy took her under his wing. The Isle of Soay has 60 inhabitants, all natives except the girl. It has no telephones and gets mail by row boat once a week.

ELKS' OFFICIAL 'HELLO BILL'

Santa Monica, Calif.—(P)—A good many member Elks probably use the lodge's greeting, "Hello Bill," without knowing how the greeting originated.

But Colin Campbell Taylor, veteran playwright and actor residing here, a life member of the Elks, and holder of Card No. 47, issued by Lodge No. 1, New York, says he is responsible.

"In 1890," says Taylor, "I wrote a play called 'Hello Bill.' It was originally produced in Minneapolis. Some of my brother Elks saw it and liked it, and the following year 'Hello Bill' was adopted as our official greeting."

MUD FIVE FEET DEEP

Zanesville, O.—(P)—Folks stayed close in their own backyards in this section alone in the 1850's, to judge from a copy of an old Zanesville paper discovered here by Mrs. Samuel M. Wince. The paper, dated March 26, 1856, relates that spring weather had produced mud up to five feet deep in the principal streets. The editor recommended plank sidewalks. Another item concerned a proposal for carrying mail to Marietta, O., a distance of 64 miles, in the "short" time of two days. News from far places consisted of squibs on Jenny Lind singing in New York and troop movements in the Crimean war.

SWEEP MONEY GOES FAR

That 27 institutions in the Irish Free State are now beneficiaries from the Irish Hospitals' sweepstakes is declared in an announcement issued in Dublin. These include 71 voluntary hospitals and county hospitals, infirmaries and special institutions controlled by the government. Since the sweepstakes were started more than $55,000,000 has been turned over to these hospitals and institutions. The money is placed in a special fund in the name of the National Hospital trustees. It is paid out on order of the hospitals' commissioner, appointed by the government some time ago to examine the conditions and requirements of hospitals and institutions.

Clare Tree Players to Stage 'Snow White' Story At College Chapel Nov. 9

A STORY which is as familiar as it is beloved by children everywhere will be presented on the stage at Lawrence Memorial chapel by the Clare Tree Major Players on Nov. 9 when the troupe gives as its first production in Appleton this season, "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs." Edison school Parent Teachers' association is sponsoring the players in Appleton for their second season. Although this play is always counted among the fairy plays, Mrs. Major, director of the players, contends that it is not.

"Actually," she says, "there are only two points in the story which justify this view, and they are only minor ones. There is a witch, it is true; but there is no magic in the apple which she gives to the wicked queen to carry to Snow White. It is a deadly poison on one side but not on the other, but it takes no magic to do that."

The only really magic thing in the story is the mirror which the prince gives the queen, the mirror which always answers truthfully any question that is asked of it. Mrs. Major says, adding that there is also the touch at the end of the play when the wicked queen is turned into a frog as punishment, which always pleases childish audiences immensely.

Any other type of punishment such as might be expected in this prosaic world would be too unimaginative for the normal child, the director feels.

Mrs. Ben Rowland is chairman of the ticket sale for the plays this season. In addition to "Snow White," Appleton children will have the opportunity of seeing three other productions this year. They are "Little Men" which will be given Dec. 14; "Captive Maid of Old Carleyle" on March 1, and "Daddy Long Legs" on April 5.

School children may obtain tickets for the plays from their teachers, and adult and children's tickets may be secured at Bellings' drug store, also.

2-Year-Old Child Has Mentality of Adult Chimpanzee

Vienna Scientists Develop New Tests for Study of Child Psychology

Vienna (P) — Does your child reach eagerly for a toy held before him? What does he do when a bell is rung and then handed to him? These are among the tests methods being developed in the psychological institute of the University of Vienna by Professors Charlotte and Karl Bucher and launched as new bases for child psychology.

One of their conclusions so far is that an average 2-year-old child has the mental development of an adult chimpanzee.

That conclusion was reached by placing a toy beyond a child's reach outside his play pen and giving him a stick. His ability to retrieve the toy with the stick is a measure of his intelligence.

Laboratory for the professors Bucher is the children's receiving station of Vienna, where children from 6 months to 3 years old are placed if their home life is unsatisfactory.

Tests Tell Character During a four weeks stay at the station they are given "play" tests to determine whether some mental or emotional difficulty requires training in an institution or whether they are normal and can be entrusted to foster parents.

One of the common tests is the "grasping tests." In this a desirable object is held before the child. Whether he reaches for it or remains passive indicates his general reaction to things about him.

Social tests are given children 2 years old or over. Several youngsters are placed together in a play pen in which there is only one toy. Whether they dominate the play and seize the toy for themselves or give it to another child are, to the psychologists, clues to their character and social attitudes.

Edna Millay Is Turning to More Serious Writing

Critics Divided by Latest Book, "Conversation At Midnight"

Austerlitz, N. Y.—Once upon a time there was a young woman in Greenwich Village who wrote poems that shocked the bourgeoisie, poems that went like this:

My candle burns at both ends; It will not last the night; But ah, my foes, and oh, my friends— It gives a lovely light!

A whole generation of undergraduates and Bohemians knew her verses by heart, quoted them, imitated them.

Today, Edna St. Vincent Millay is older, more serious. Her fame is universal. But as she looks around her, she sees her light-headed world of the years after the war transformed by the political hatreds of mankind. So she has laid aside the lyric of love and beauty in which she excels, to put down in verse the troubled thought of our time.

Critics Are Divided Her latest book, "Conversation At Midnight," has divided her critics and readers. Some praise it as her greatest work; others wish she had continued to write lyrics with the tight-packed, singing line of which she is master. This she does not mind. What she does mind, is the inference that she has just become social-conscious. To this she replies: "Nobody has ever read me."

"It is ridiculous to say that I have suddenly become aware of the life going on around me," she exclaims with passion. "I've always been aware, always been writing about it."

"What was 'Resurrection' about? It was about people who were suffering. And that was my first poem. More than 10 years ago I wrote a play called 'Aria da Capo'—that was about the war."

Retains Girlish Vivacity She speaks with compelling earnestness, brushing away with an impatient gesture a lock of blonde hair falling from its orderly bob over her brow. Pale green eyes sparkle like emeralds, and her voice rings clear, with a warm, agreeable cadence.

She received her visitor in a cool, pleasant room of her farmhouse here. There were two grand pianos in the room. A few minutes before, she had been playing tennis, and now she was wearing lounge slippers with a flower pattern. Her slight figure seemed lithe and strong, and her girlish, freckled face glowed with vivacity and health.

To those who know her work, the intellectual autopsy which her characters in "Conversation At Midnight" hold over the world's ills is no new departure for the author of "The Ballad Of The Harp-Woman," "The Sacco-Vanzetti Sequence," "The Buck In The Snow," her "Epitaph For The Race Of Man" in "Wine From These Grapes." She has looked with clear eyes on beauty, on poverty, on injustice, and given them all her voice.

"Natural Direction" A sentence of Thomas Mann's was quoted: "The destiny of man predestines us to our time in a political sense."

"I agree," she said. "Yes, of course. That's excellent." Did she think there was a tendency toward political expression in contemporary literature? She looked thoughtful. It was a subject reviewers of "Conversation At Midnight" had touched upon.

"Yes," she agreed, "but great poetry has seldom come out of taking sides, and is not likely to. However, that's a different matter from having a natural direction from lyrical toward dramatic poetry, and following it. It would be hard to look at the 'destiny of man' today with the eyes of the dramatist, and not find one's self at moments looking into the eyes of a politician."

Hasn't Abandoned Lyrics "I, for instance am moving naturally in the direction of dramatic poetry—by which I don't mean," she threw in impatiently, "that I've given up writing lyric poetry. Really, the public is very stern with the artist—it looks upon him as an inspired scatter-brain, yet expects him to proceed in more rigidly methodical fashion than any banker! I've given up nothing. But the poet who is both lyrical and dramatic is usually turns to drama; Shakespeare did; Shelley would certainly have done so. Shelley died young. "If you don't change and develop between your first book and your 10th," she said after a pause, "then you just keep on re-writing your self. And it seems to me that life should do more for you than just keep you alive. After all, a child is not merely fed by the food he eats; he is strengthened, and he grows. It's the same with the poet—that is to say, if he has a hearty appetite for life. It's no good nibbling at it. Ten's added with a smile: "He must also, of course, have an excellent digestion."

China Seeking to Protect Children Against 'Slavery'

Shanghai, China (P) — Millions, the virtual slaves of little girls, a system which has existed in China for centuries, is being investigated by Shanghai's municipal council, which hopes to force the registration of such children and thus to be able to protect them. So deeply is the custom rooted that efforts to stop it have failed so far.

Poor people give up their daughters to wealthier families as adopted children. The little girls act as personal maids and do light house work. When they reach marriageable age, the mistress of the house is obligated to find them husbands and provide them with dowries. Although the system is not slavery in one sense, there is no supervision to protect the children from abuse.

Formal legal action is not necessary to effect an adoption and it is difficult to determine whether the transaction was the buying and selling of a child or a genuine adoption. In case of legal action being taken against an alleged slave trader, the defense can always be raised that the child has been adopted.

ENTERTAIN AT PARTY Deer Creek—Mr. and Mrs. Otto Pomer of Deer Creek entertained a group of relatives and friends at dinner and supper Sunday. Those present were Mr. and Mrs. William Volz and sons, Eldor, Walter and Herbert, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Volz, Miss Irene Tech and William Dreier.

He usually turns to drama; Shakespeare did; Shelley would certainly have done so. Shelley died young. "If you don't change and develop between your first book and your 10th," she said after a pause, "then you just keep on re-writing your self. And it seems to me that life should do more for you than just keep you alive. After all, a child is not merely fed by the food he eats; he is strengthened, and he grows. Health Officials Work to Prevent Plague Outbreak

Bubonic-Bearing Fleas are Found on Wild Rodents in Western States

Denver (P)—Flea hunters of the United States public health service are investigating conditions in western states which they fear might lead to an outbreak of bubonic plague. This they say is the "black death" which, in the 14th century, wiped out one-fourth of the known world's population.

Dr. C. R. Eskey, senior surgeon in charge of plague suppressive measures, with headquarters in San Francisco, says wild rodents—chipmunks, ground squirrels and prairie dogs—have been found in seven states in the last three years carrying plague-bearing fleas.

The flea hunters, under his direction, have killed thousands of rodents in those and neighboring states this summer in an effort to determine areas infested with carriers of the disease.

Few Human Cases "The incidence of human infection has been slight thus far," Dr. Eskey reports, "but the potential dangers are so great that the situation demands continued surveys for the discovery of foci of infection and further investigation of all the factors involved in the dissemination."

He urges eradication of infected rodents in certain danger zones. In the last four years, he says there have been only eight human cases of plague in the United States—five in California and one each in Oregon, Nevada and Utah. All victims recovered but one, a sheep herder in Lake county, Oregon, who died of plague in 1934.

"Apparently there is not nearly as much danger from human contact with plague-infected wild rodents," he says, "as there is with infected domestic rats."

Infection Spreads Inland Rodent plague first was discovered in the United States among domestic rats in San Francisco in 1900. It was believed stamped out among the rats, Dr. Eskey says, but later was discovered in field rodents. The area of infection first was believed to be a limited one in California.

But in 1934—as plague-carrying fleas apparently spread inland from domestic rats in coastal ports to common field rodents—the plague was discovered among rodents in interior counties of southern California. Dr. Eskey says, and in northeast California an dsouthwest Oregon.

Found In Seven States Since the public health service began its investigation, he reports, further evidence of the disease among rodents has been found in Nevada, Utah, Montana, Idaho and Washington.

No trace of the disease has been found in Wyoming, Arizona, Colorado and New Mexico where tests also were conducted. But Dr. Eskey adds: "The eastward progress of the infection will continue for an indefinite time."

This summer five rolling laboratories, manned by flea hunters, were put in the field. Their job: to shoot thousands of rodents, to dissect them for evidence of the disease, to de-flea them and to send the fleas and dead tissues to the plague laboratory in San Francisco.

There guinea pigs are exposed to the tissues and fleas from the dead rodents as a final test to determine if plague is present.

Danes Governing Village Far North Of Arctic Circle

Thule, Greenland, Now Important Missionary, Trading Center

Washington, D. C.—Thule, Greenland, one of the world's northernmost permanent settlements about 350 miles north of the Arctic Circle, now is for the first time under the direct control of the Danish government, which holds sovereign rights over all of Greenland, and has actively governed much of the coast.

"Thule is a village of about 311 inhabitants, nearly all Eskimos, situated on the southern shore of Wolstenholme Fjord off Baffin Bay," says the National Geographic Society.

"Since its discovery by the Danish explorer, Knud Rasmussen on the first Thule Expedition in 1912-13, it has been under an autonomous government by native hunters. The explorer set up this local government, a system that until the recent action of the Danish government was successfully operated in the remote Arctic outpost."

Base of Expeditions "While Thule's population growth has not been impressive, the village has become important as a trading and missionary station for a vast region of northwestern Greenland, and the headquarters and starting point for several important Arctic expeditions."

"The village was particularly popular with Rasmussen on his numerous journeys into the Arctic. His first expedition out of Thule in 1912, returned after several months with data on meteorology and natural history of northern Greenland. He learned how the Eskimos lived in the frigid northland and his researches not only aided his own subsequent Greenland expeditions but also polar dashes that were to take place in later years."

"Tragedy stalked the second Thule expedition in 1916 under Rasmussen. One man died; another was lost and never found; but the expedition mapped the region covered and brought back to the station important findings in geology and botany."

"Three years later, Rasmussen journeyed from Thule to Angmagssalik on the east coast, collecting data on Eskimo tales and legends. His most extensive expedition in which Thule played a part however, was that of 1921-24 when the intrepid explorer crossed the Arctic wastes from Thule to Bering strait, studying the life and culture of the Eskimo tribes he met on his route."

Fine Ideals Accompany Phrases Into Discard

BY DOROTHY DIX

Do you ever think how many words and phrases have become virtually obsolete in the last twenty years, and how the whole trend of conversation has altered? There is no better yardstick by which to measure the changes that have taken place, for we would be almost as unintelligible to our grandchildren if we talked to them in Chaucer English as we would be if we used the vocabulary in vogue when we were sweet-and-twenty and up-to-date.

In those days, for instance, certain subjects were taboo and never mentioned except in private. Matters of sex were not discussed in polite society. Now they are the favorite dinner-table topics. People did not describe the particulars of their diseases to one another but their physicians. Now we cannot choose but listen to every detail of their major and minor operations, and the gorier they were the more they publicize them. Then family scandals were shushed up, and you couldn't have drawn any detail about a daughter's elopement or a son's wild cat crop out of their parents with wild horses. Now they call in the reporters and give spicy interviews to the newspapers.

Then there were stories that men never told in the presence of women. Now it is the men who have to blushingly retire from the room when women begin to tell stories. Then "hell" and "damn" were words that were seldom heard outside of a church. Now they are the pet and stay of all conversation and the younger generation would be almost inarticulate if deprived of them. Swearing—can you imagine it—was considered vulgar, especially for the fair sex. The most that any well-brought-up girl could stay under any provocation was "Oh fie!" or "Goodness me!" But the modern debutante's supply of oaths turns a mule-skinner green with envy.

In those ancient days "woman's sacred influence" was a theme on every tongue. People actually believed in it. Novels were based on it. Clergymen preached about it. Orators implored women to save the world by using their sacred influence. But when did you ever hear anybody mention woman's sacred influence in these days? Even to recall it is like fetching down something from the hair trunk in the attic that you haven't thought of for years and years and that the children never heard about.

In those days also part of the technique of courtship was for the girl to "reform" the man. It was really her trump card. Her role was to be very pure and saintly and his to be very wicked, and she was always lifting him up to her higher level and sending him good books and telling him how she prayed for him every night. And when a woman prays for a man her prayers are always answered by her getting him. But the reformation route to the altar was definitely closed when girls took to smoking and drinking and petting.

Then, the meaning of words has changed. It used to be that the ambition of every girl was to be a lady, and every mother's admonition to her little daughter was, "Now try to act like a little lady." But you could probably offer a girl of today no more deadly insult than to call her a lady, unless you were to say that she was "sweet" or a "nice girl." She has no desire to be any of these things. She wants to be considered tough, hard-boiled, a good sport, sophisticated.

Modesty is another word that you hear as seldom as you see it illustrated in real life, yet there was a time when it was considered that the choicest compliment you could pay a girl was to call her "modest." Now she would just as soon that

Grooming Now Basis For Glamor

BY ELSIE PIERCE

Time was when it was first above all. But time changes. And beauty standards with it. Now good grooming is not enough. It is merely the basis upon which we build glamor. Paradoxically, though, because good grooming is not enough, it becomes increasingly important. For without it, the whole structure collapses. You cannot have glamor without perfect grooming, just as you can't have beauty without health. (A very complete bulletin called "Good Grooming" may be had for a self-addressed stamped (3-cent) envelope—If you will write (care of this paper) for it, mentioning it by name.)

From the crown of the head, then, to the tip of the toes, look to the details that make you look well turned out. Whatever the style of your coiffure, it is at its best only when it is "in place." Do you know that the French translation of our permanent wave is: "put in place?" Of course, no coiffure shows off to advantage unless the hair is scrupulously clean, brushed and polished so that its color and highlights accent the coiffure itself.

No matter what your make-up, the skin it enhances must be flawless, properly cleansed and toned and "prepared" for that make-up with a good foundation cream.

The figure comes in for the lion's share in the beauty scheme. It takes a lot of weight watching and exercising to keep the figure well proportioned. The lines of one's clothes can help or hinder, accentuate or disguise, as the case may be. Then, of course, the matter of keeping clothes clean, unwrinkled, in repair—all these things are details of good grooming. Little lingerie touches that are white to begin with must remain snow white all the time, even if they have to spend half their lives at the cleaners.

Stockings seams straight . . . if you feel like shrugging your shoulders and saying "piffle . . . that's taken for granted" just look at some of the stocking seams, and on well dressed women, too. Another detail . . . running heels. If you run down readily perhaps you are not wearing the proper shoes, perhaps your posture is at fault, but in any case keep the heels in repair while you're slouching as to the reasons why and wherefore.

Details of daintiness we take for granted. They are so important that one cannot hope to be well groomed or glamorous without attention to them.

My complete new booklet "Reduce by Exercise" (Booklet 202) is yours for ten cents. It covers the subject thoroughly. Send for it, giving your name and full address to the Bell Library, care of this newspaper, 247 W. 43rd street, New York, N. Y.

Old Gardener Says:

In the search for perennials to bloom very late in the season, garden makers often overlook the hardy sunflower (Helianthus maximiliani), in spite of the fact that it has been known for a generation and is among the latest of all perennials to flower, often blooming freely in October. This sunflower has small golden-yellow blossoms which appear in long graceful sprays, and which keep well when cut. H. rigidus japonicus is another good hardy sunflower, which persists until late in the season. The flowers are yellow with dark centers and are very decorative when taken indoors. These sunflowers are very readily handled but make somewhat large clumps, for which reason they must have an abundance of room.

HOSTESS QUESTIONS

Dear Mrs. Post: Three sisters are going to entertain for a friend who recently announced her engagement. The problem is this: The eldest sister, who lives at home, is the bride-to-be, but the sister next to the eldest is married and we are wondering whether this fact will make it necessary that she sit at the head of the table, and if so, is the guest of honor seated at her right? Or how?

Answer: Whichever sister is considered the hostess sits at the head of the table, and the guest at her right. If the married sister lives in her own house, the one older unmarried sister who lives at home is certainly the hostess. If both live at home I still think the older sister is the proper hostess (unless the married one runs the house). In any case the one who sits at the head of the table on that particular day is hostess.

Dear Mrs. Post: Will you kindly tell me something about the duties of a social hostess. I shall appreciate the information more than I can tell you as I believe I would like to fit myself for such a position.

Answer: The duties of a professional hostess vary somewhat in each hotel, which the management will explain to you when you secure a position. In general outline, you make yourself tactfully useful. The emphasis is on the word "tact" which must include accuracy of preception amounting to a sixth sense, so as not to neglect those who need your assistance, but on the other hand not to force your attentions on those who really want to be let alone.

Dear Mrs. Post: Will you explain just what are the essential differences between the duties and clothes of a hostess who gives a party in her own house and one who gives the party in a hotel or club.

Answer: None that I know of. Except perhaps that the hotel management is responsible for the food and service. In her own house anything that falls short of excellence is the fault of the hostess. Otherwise her duties are the same. She must be ready to receive a few minutes before the hour set, and she must look after her guests to the best of her ability to see that none are either marooned or bored.

Today's Menu

HALLOWEEN RECIPES

Spooky Salads

- 1 package orange-flavored gelatin
- 1 cup nuts
- 1 package mixture
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1 2-3 cups boiling water
- 1 cup salad dressing
- 2 tablespoons Pecans
- orange juice
- Pecan candy gum
- 1 cup chopped dates
- drops

Dissolve gelatin in water. Add orange juice. Chill until gelatin has thickened slightly. Add dates, apples, nuts and salt.

Fill small individual molds and chill until firm. Unmold in nests of crisp lettuce and cover with dressing. Mark "features" on each salad with pecans and gum drops.

Pumpkin Tarts

- 8 unbaked crusts
- 1 teaspoon ginger
- 1 cup cooked pumpkin
- 1-3 teaspoon salt
- 1 cup dark brown sugar
- 1 teaspoon vanilla
- 1 1/2 tablespoons cinnamon
- 1 tablespoon flour
- 1/2 teaspoon cloves
- 2 eggs, beaten
- 1 1/2 cups milk

Mix pumpkin with sugar, spices, salt, vanilla and flour. Add eggs and milk. Fill the crusts which have been placed in deep muffin pans or individual pie pans. Bake for ten minutes in a hot oven. Lower heat and bake 20 minutes in a moderate oven.

The tarts may be topped with whipped cream arranged as "features."

Fruit Corn Balls

- 1 cup molasses
- 1/2 teaspoon soda
- 1 cup brown sugar
- 2-3 cup shredded nuts
- 1 cup water
- roasted pecans
- 3 tablespoons butter
- 3 quarts popped corn
- 2 tablespoons vinegar

Boil slowly and without stirring the molasses, sugar, water and vinegar. When a portion of the syrup "clicks" when it is hit against the side of a cup of cold water, add the soda. Mix until very "foamy." Pour over the rest of the ingredients, which have been combined. When cool enough to handle, press into balls that are three inches in diameter. Wrap in waxed paper and stick Halloween cut-outs or stickers on each ball.

HANDLE WITH CARE

Don't bang porcelain or enameled kitchen equipment against stoves, tables or sinks. It will chip or crack if it is roughly handled. Many of the more modern, attractive pieces require special care.

That household nuisance—mildew—can be avoided if damp articles are never placed in clothes hampers. Dry all clothing and household linen thoroughly. Don't let it collect in damp basements, dark closets or other spots that are likely to be damp.

Failure to Return Lead Helps Player Make Bid

Mr. Culbertson is conducting, through this column, a national examination of bridge players. Rate yourself by subtracting from 100 the points for each wrong answer.

BY ELY CULBERTSON

Questions 23 and 24 of the National Self-Rating Bridge Examination appeared yesterday. They were:

Question 23: Both sides vulnerable. You are North, the dealer. You hold:

♠ K 6 ♥ K Q 8 3 ♦ A J 7 4 ♣ K 9 4

You bid one heart; next hand passes; your partner bids three clubs; next hand passes.

What do you make now?

Answer: Your rebid should be three diamonds. There is no reason for failing to show your second suit and you can do so more cheaply at this stage than you will probably be able to do later if you now bid either three notrump or four clubs. (One point demerit for any rebid other than three diamonds.)

Question 24: Both sides vulnerable. You are South and hold:

♠ A J 9 5 ♥ J ♦ K 5 4 2 ♣ 9 7 4

Your partner dealt and the bidding proceeded:

North East South West
2 hearts Pass 3 diamonds Pass
3 hearts Pass 3 spades Pass
4 hearts Pass ?

What call do you make now?

Answer: You now should bid five hearts. True, you already have made two positive responses, but the fact remains that your partner started with a two bid and it is inconceivable that he will be unable to make at least eleven tricks with your good hand. Partner already has bid hearts three times. Your heart jack may be a vital card for slam purposes. At any rate, you must give him one more urge. Two points demerit for passing. One point demerit for any other bid except five hearts.

TODAY'S QUESTIONS

Question 25: Both sides vulnerable. You are South. Your partner dealt and bid one no trump. Next hand passed. You hold:

What call do you make?

Question 26: Both sides vulnerable.

Crossing The Atlantic

III.—THIRD DAY AT SEA

If the great, fast-moving engines of an ocean liner can be called the heart of the ship, the "Bridge" is the head. It is the place where the captain and other chief officers spend most of their time.

An "Iron Mike."

The bridge is near the front of the ship, and a clear view of the sea ahead can be obtained from it. Passengers are not allowed to go there as a rule, but the captain kindly gave me permission when I told him I would like to tell readers of our column about it. One of the interesting things I saw was the "Iron Mike." This is a device which makes it more simple to steer a vessel.

In the old days the pilot or the quartermaster had to stay at the wheel all the time, moving it this way and that during the ocean crossing. Nowadays the more modern liners have "Iron Mikes." The Mike is set in a certain direction, and the vessel travels along without anyone touching the wheel. In case of fog, a seaman takes the wheel. The steering is also done by hand when the vessel is entering or leaving a harbor.

Officers of the ship showed me some of the interesting things on the Bridge. One of these was a kind of speedometer. By turning a button, an officer started a hand moving across a dial. It did not stop moving until it reached the figure showing the speed at which we were going. At the moment, when the test was made for me, we were traveling 31 knots an hour in other words, more than 35 land miles per hour.

The officer showed me a device used to learn the depth of the water. Sound waves are sent down to the bottom of the sea, from which they "bounce back." The rate at which sound travels through salt water is known. The time taken for the sound to go to the bottom and back again tells the depth of the water. An ocean liner moving at high speed cannot get echoes from very deep water but testing to a depth of a quarter of a mile, or so, takes care of all needs.

A chart which was shown me on the Bridge gave a good idea of the humps and downs of the ocean bottom. In some places there are great cliffs with steep sides going down hundreds of feet.

Need Mastery of Words To Interpret Problems

BY ANGELO PATRI

"This is a pretty good report, Arthur, but I don't understand this. It says: 'Oral work good. Seems to have trouble with reading problems. Advise eye test.'"

"Yes, that's what Miss Maurer said."

"But your eyes are all right. The doctor tested them at the beginning of the term. Well, go in and ask him to do it again. That's all. You can't have a deficiency in mathematics."

"The doctor says my eyes are perfect, ma," was Arthur's report. "He says I see fine. So it can't be my eyes."

"Well, then, why can't you read problems?"

"I can. I do read them."

"All right. Read me one. Read the last one you had in class."

Arthur picked up his elementary geometry and read, clearly enough, the problem about the tree's shadow.

"You read it all right. Now do it."

"I guess I can do it. Let me see. What did it say, mother?"

"What did it say? You've just read what it said."

"Yes, I know. Let me see—e-e. The tree is thirty-two feet high. What does it say about it, ma?"

"Read it again, Arthur. Read it slowly. So. Now work it."

"I can't. If you help me I can. You tell me the numbers and things."

"No wonder you get a note on your card. Who's going to tell you what the problem says in examination time? Can't you read?"

"Sure I can read, but I don't know what it says to do. If you tell me what it says to do I can do it."

There are always a few children who fail in mathematics and chemistry and physics because they cannot get the meaning of the words that set the problem. They read the words. They have not mastered the interpretation of the words they read. Most children do this easily enough with a little practice in interpreting what they read and come must have very careful instruction to enable them to do so. If their difficulty is overlooked they are certain to fail in written tests, in all assignments that demand interpretation of language into ideas.

The written work should always be simpler than the oral reader might call for. A child masters words long before he masters their

Governor Seeks Suggestions on New Department

Asks City Officials to Refer Business, Industrial Problems

Advice and suggestions as to how the new state department of commerce can render maximum service to industry in Appleton and Wisconsin industry in general was solicited in a letter received by Carl J. Bocher, city clerk, from Governor Philip F. LaFollette this morning.

Mr. LaFollette said the "economic well-being of Wisconsin is based upon prosperous development of agriculture, business and labor. The state government, through its various departments, has been giving assistance to agriculture and labor, but up to now we have had no agency of government concerned with our industrial life."

Study Problems

The department of commerce is designed to promote the economic development of Wisconsin industry, to study industrial and business problems and to find solutions for them, and generally to aid in protecting the interests and welfare of Wisconsin business, according to LaFollette's letter.

The governing body of the department, provided for in a bill recently enacted by the legislature, will be drawn from those actively concerned with day-to-day problems, he continues. "It is my sincere hope that the department of commerce will be able to accomplish much toward the continued industrial development and stability of Wisconsin."

Mr. LaFollette said he would appreciate advice and suggestions from city officials on the management and aims of the department for service to local industry.

purpose of effecting a speedy settlement.

"The Chinese-Japanese difficulties can be solved only through direct negotiations between the two powers on whom falls the common burden of responsibility for the stability of east Asia," the informal statement stated.

The text of the formal refusal follows:

"The Japanese government have the honor to acknowledge receipt of a note under the date of Oct. 26, The League of Nations in a report adopted Oct. 6 has declared on the basis of a declaration by only one of two parties that military operations carried on by Japan are in violation of the nine-power treaty.

"Japan's action in China is a measure of self-defense which she was compelled to take in the face of China's violent anti-Japanese policy and practice, especially by her provocative act appealing to the force of arms against Japan."

The assembly of the League of Nations have even gone to the length of assuring China moral support and recommending that its members abstain from any action which might weaken China's power of resistance and add difficulties to the present conflict and also to study how they might individually aid China.

"This does not take into account the imperial government's just intention proposing to bring about sincere cooperation of Japan and China, assuring enduring peace in east Asia and contributing thereby to world peace.

"This takes sides with one of the parties and encourages a hostile

Suggests Settlement Of Inter-County Case

Marshfield.—(P)—An inter-county court "war" appeared settled today, with the case of a Wood county man against a Clark county man dismissed in municipal court on condition that an opposite case be dismissed at Neillsville.

It all started when cars driven by Chas. Renne, Lindsey, Wood county, and Ray Lindow, Clark county, collided on the county line. Each brought a suit in his own county, charging the other with reckless driving.

Yesterday Municipal Judge Aubrey Wharfield agreed to quash Renne's case if Clark county would return the favor and drop Lindow's case.

Links Bid With League

"The royal government's invitation does not make mention of the connection of the proposed conference and the league. However, in view of the fact that in its resolution the league has suggested a meeting of those of its members who were a party to the nine-power treaty, and that the government of the United States, who have acquiesced to the request of the government of Great Britain for the convocation of a conference, have declared on Oct. 6 approval of this resolution, the imperial government cannot but conclude that convocation of the conference is linked by resolution with the league. Now, the league has expressed views tending to a reflection on the honor of Japan and has adopted a resolution which was manifestly unfriendly to her. Under these circumstances the imperial government is constrained to believe that a frank, full discussion to bring about a just and realistic solution of the conflict between Japan and China cannot be expected between the powers concerned at the proposed conference."

"For these reasons explained above the imperial government regret their inability to accept the invitation of the royal government."

Asks "Cooperation"

"Consequently what is most urgently needed for solution of the conflict is a realization by the Chinese government of the common responsibility of Japan and China respecting stability of east Asia, respecting their attitude and a chance of policy to that of cooperation between the two countries."

"What Japan asks of the powers is that they comprehend fully this need. Their cooperation based on such a comprehension can alone, she believes, contribute effectively to the stabilization of east Asia."

Foreign Minister Hirota summarized United States Ambassador Joseph C. Grew and British Ambassador Sir Robert L. Craigie and explained the grounds for Japan's refusal.

SCOUTS IN ANNUAL DRIVE FOR CLOTHES

Boy Scouts of the city are conducting their annual drive this week for clothes to go into the community store room, a project sponsored annually by the Appleton Relief and Welfare Council.

The scouts have been assigned to sections of the city according to troops and are calling at homes for donations. In the above picture, two of them are calling on Mrs. F. N. Belanger, 218 N. Union street, and she has just given her contribution to John Milhaupt. Behind him is Fred Helmriz who has made a collection at another home. The boys are members of Troop 1 of the St. Joseph's Catholic church.

Because the federal government has stopped furnishing materials for relief sewing projects and provides only the wages, the need for clothes is particularly urgent this year. The material will be made over into new garments. (Post-Crescent Photo)

Associated Press Reporter Tells How Burning Chapei Meets Its Doom

BY MORRIS J. HARRIS

Shanghai.—(P)—Historic Chapei, world-renowned since the clash of China's nineteenth route army with the Japanese in 1932, met its final doom tonight.

Whipped by a southerly wind, miles of flames swept through what was left of this one-time human-packed city which again became a battlefield Aug. 13. The fires started early today when the Chinese resistance to the Japanese collapsed.

The scenes here tonight were virtually identical to those I saw in 1932 when the terrific struggle ended as it did today, with a sudden Chinese withdrawal before the relentless punishment of the Japanese mechanized army and navy.

Stretching from well toward Kiangnan southward into Chapei to the very edges of the International Settlement, thence westward for an undetermined number of miles, uncontrolled fire swept whatever was in its path.

Struggle Continues

Patches of shell-torn but thus far unburned buildings dotted the huge area in which courageous Chinese troops, refusing to retreat before the Japanese thrust, fought on. But they seemingly were destined to be engulfed in the flames if Japanese bullets did not bring a speedier end.

Vast sheets of flame shot toward the sky. The heat was so intense it was felt throughout the city. Meanwhile, United States marines were authorized to open fire in self-defense on any airplane attacking them or noncombatants in their sector of the International Settlement.

Admiral Harry Yarnell, commander of the United States Asiatic fleet, authorized the defensive measure as fierce fighting intensified by the retreat of Chinese troops from Chapei to the new defense line, raged menacingly around the settlement.

Fight to Save Area

Firemen from the International Settlement, deployed on the south bank of Soochow creek, continued to fight to save the foreign area from destruction. In a single area where the flames jumped the creek 150 buildings were burned, but the firemen said the fire was under control.

Beyond the western borders of the settlement where the Chinese and Japanese seemingly were preparing to resume their fighting, additional fires lit the horizon. All Shanghai to the south of the creek watched this awesome sight, braving the dangers of stray bullets and shell fragments which continued to come.

It was a repetition of 1932 on a larger scale. Being a survivor of Japan's great earthquake Sept. 1, 1923, I saw Tokyo and Yokohama burn in fires resulting from that disaster. Tonight recalled those horrors. Chapei will be blackened ruins devoid of life before the flames, threatening all Shanghai, subside.

Police Pick Up Speeder Who Failed to Pay Fine

Peter Danforth, route 2, West De Pere, was arrested by Menasha police this morning and held for Police Chief John Bernardy, Kimberly.

Danforth was fined $10 and costs at Kimberly Oct. 7 on a charge of speeding on Kimberly avenue through the school zone. He promised to pay the fine Oct. 16 but failed to do so, Bernardy said. Arrangements were made for Chief Bernardy to collect the fine and costs next Tuesday.

SPEEDER FINED

John F. Babino, 1730 W. Rogers avenue, pleaded guilty of speeding and was fined $10 and costs in municipal court this afternoon by Judge Thomas H. Ryan. Babino was arrested by Appleton police yesterday on N. Oneida street.

Area Mined

The Chinese were known to have mined the area, and it was believed the mines were touched off after the Japanese advanced.

Retreating Chinese were expected to reorganize defenses on Soochow creek banks. Bitter engagements were reported at the bottleneck junction of the Shanghai-Nanking and Shanghai-Nanchow railroads, the only Chinese outlet from Chapei.

At Nanking, General Chang Chun, secretary general of the Chinese political council, declared the government is "not disturbed" by the Chinese retreats. He described them as "strategic withdrawals," well planned in advance, and intended to give us stronger positions along second defense lines."

5 Subcommittees Named to Speed Up Farm Measure

No Decision Made on Holding Hearings, Chairman Jones Announces

Washington.—(P)—Chairman Jones (D-Texas) designated five subcommittees of the house agriculture committee today to expedite preparation of a general farm control bill for the special congressional session.

The subcommittees were charged with drafting those portions of the legislation which will apply primarily to corn, tobacco, dairying, wheat and rice and cotton.

Jones said that after a "discussion of the general picture," among 11 members present, a meeting of the committee adjourned until Friday.

Jones said there had been no decision on holding hearings, or on conferring with administration farm officials, or representatives of farm organizations, on terms of legislation designed to stabilize agricultural prices.

Asked whether he was confident that a bill would be ready for consideration when congress meets Nov. 15, he replied:

"Let's not go into that now."

May Name Others

He said additional subcommittees would be named later "if necessary." An indication that dairying might receive increased emphasis in the projected measure was apparent in the naming of a subcommittee to consider it. In bills already pending before the committee, dairying has not been put in a separate division.

The subcommittees will be made up of these members:

Corn—Representatives Polk (D-Ohio), Biermann (D-Iowa), Nelson (D-Mo.), Lucas (D-Ill.), Gilchrist (D-Iowa).

Tobacco—Representatives Mitchell (D-Tenn.), Flannagan (D-Va.), Cooley (D-N.C.), Kinzer (R-Pa.), Dairying—Kleberg (D-Texas), Beam (D-Ill.), Hook (D-Mich.), Hoffman (R-Mich.), Tobey (R-N.H.), Andersen (R-Minn.), Lord (R-N.Y.), Boleau (P-Wis.).

Wheat and rice—Pierce (D-Ore.), Coffee (D-Neb.), Cummings (D-Colo.), Hope (R-Kans.).

Cotton—Fulmer (D-S.C.), Doxey (D-Miss.), Owen (D-Ga.), Kleberg and Cooley.

Committees described regulation of the nation's annual corn crop as their principal stumbling block.

CIO Turns Down Counter-Proposal Of Federation

proposal which A. F. of L. leaders indicated privately they could not accept.

Lewis suggested that the CIO fly the A. F. of L. banner but remain an independent organization. Lewis also suggested that the A. F. of L. recognize the principle of industrial organization in all mass production, marine, public utility, service and basic fabricating industries.

A. F. of L. acceptance would have meant that the federation's craft unions would be eliminated from most of the country's big industries—such as automobiles, steel and glass.

The federation's proposal, submitted at the start of this morning's conference, represented no change in the federation's attitude since the Lewis revolt started brewing five years ago.

The federation insists that the territory claimed by its craft unions of highly skilled workers must be protected and that the craft workers must be permitted to use their skill in determining their wages and working conditions.

The CIO, on the other hand, has insisted that the nation's big industries never will be organized unless the workers in each are brought into one big union.

Murray sent his statement out of the peace conference room while committees from each side still were meeting.

Furniture Concern Found Guilty of Unfair Practices

Board Orders Stevens Point Concern to Reinstate 32 Workers

Madison.—(P)—The state labor relations board held today that the Folding Furniture Works of Stevens Point had been guilty of unfair labor practices and ordered the firm to reinstate 32 production employees who the board said were discharged for union activity.

The decision followed a hearing at Stevens Point Sept. 1 and 2 on complaint of Local 1805, United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners.

The board said the company violated the state labor board act by discouraging membership in the union, refusing to bargain collectively with it, and dismissing union employees.

The 32 workers ordered reinstated were discharged June 25. Under the board's decision they are entitled to back pay, less any amounts earned since June 25.

Criticized Union

"Testimony taken at the hearing and referred to in the board's decision," said the formal announcement, "shows that John Wozalla, secretary of the Folding Furniture Works, had repeatedly condemned the union to attacking the union and its representatives and attempting to coerce his workers to give up their union affiliations."

"Wozalla testified that he discharged the union members, because they refused to abandon collective bargaining until Oct. 1 and for the further reason that they decided to enter into a formal agreement to remain at work under the existing conditions of employment."

The board found that the immediate cause of the discharge was the exercise by the workers of the rights guaranteed to them under the Wisconsin labor relations act.

In another case the board ordered a hearing at Crandon Nov. 5 on the complaint of the International Woodworkers of America, Local 125 (CIO), against the Connor Lumber and Land company, Lona.

The union charged that W. D. Connor, Jr., and George Britton, company officials, spoke against the union at organization meetings and workers have been discharged for union activity.

Athletic Program Designed to Teach Games for Leisure

Jorgensen Outlines Physical Education Aims At Lions Meeting

Neenah—To teach students games that they may use their leisure time profitably is the aim of physical education in high schools, Ole Jorgensen, physical education instructor and basketball coach at Neenah High school, told fellow members of the Neenah Lions club Tuesday night at the Valley Inn in a talk in which he outlined the three high school athletic units.

In physical education classes, the only subject required in schools by state law, boys and girls are taught the technique and skill of playing the games, but not enough time is allotted for them to actually play the games, according to the instructor.

The intra-mural activities offer this opportunity, giving the students a chance to put into use the things they learned in gymnasium classes, the coach said. The old idea of teaching physical education has been abandoned, and an informal program has been substituted, seasonal sports being taught, the coach pointed out.

Through this informal program the aim of physical education, namely health, sportsmanship, leadership, character and muscular coordination, are carried out, he added.

Feeder for Varsity
"Intra-mural activities are also a feeder for varsity athletic teams," the coach explained. "The set-up includes 24 activities, basketball, baseball, basketball, rapid fire, boxing, checkers, chess, free throw, golf, ice hockey, horsemanship, lacrosse, ping pong, rope climbing, shuffleboard, ice skating, speed ball, tag football, tennis, track, tug-of-war, volleyball and wrestling."

All high school students are eligible to compete in intra-mural athletics regardless of age, grades, or other requirements, he said. The students compete for the pleasure of play, with only four awards being granted each year. Medals are awarded to a student in each of the four classes on the basis of the amount of competition.

The instructor claimed that ping pong is the most popular intra-mural sport and said he regarded tag football more dangerous than football.

Pay Own Way
After explaining the interscholastic unit in the school which is controlled by the Wisconsin Interscholastic Athletic association and Northwestern Wisconsin conference, the coach pointed out that these sports, except for the past few years, have been self supporting. Preceding the depression the sports, including football, basketball, track, tennis, hockey, golf, baseball and wrestling, not only were self supporting but netted a surplus which carried through most of the depression. During the last couple of years, however, school board appropriations have been needed.

The cage coach also discussed the two important changes in basketball rules, the elimination of the center jump and moving the ball inside the court six feet to prevent an outside tip on jump ball.

Members of the Neenah club were invited to attend the annual Halloween party to be sponsored by the Appleton Lions club at 6:30 Monday night at the Conway hotel.

Clubs from Menasha, Kaukauna, New London and Clintonville will be represented at the party, it was said.

Pupils Will be Excused
To Attend Appleton Play
Neenah—Cooperating with Neenah Parent-Teacher groups, C. F. Hedges, superintendent of schools, has given permission for any students who wish to attend the first of the Clare Tree Lumber Children's Theater plays at Lawrence college chapel Tuesday, Nov. 9, to be excused at 3 o'clock.

Tickets for the play, "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" may be secured from Mrs. Frank Wozniak, 449 E. Columbus avenue, or at the Belling drug store, Appleton. Mrs. L. M. Catlin and Mrs. Andrew Hoffmeyer of the Nicolet school Parent-Teacher group in Menasha are also planning to transport children to and from the Appleton college chapel for the play, and are accepting reservations.

Guests will include the Otto children, Mrs. William Collins, Mrs. Herman Stahl, Mrs. Fred Stahl, Alvin, Harold and Edward Otto, all of Neenah; and Mrs. Joe Bennett, Oshkosh, and Louis Otto, Jr., both of Menasha. Another son, Arthur, who lives in Greenville, S. C., may attend also.

Others who are expected to be present at the anniversary party are Mrs. Anna Kolbe and Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Kolbe and family, Neenah, Mr. and Mrs. William Otto and family, Mrs. Martha Drews, Oshkosh, Mr. and Mrs. Norman Drews and family, Green Lake, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Otto, Oshkosh and Miss Pauline Winter, Clintonville.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Louis Otto, 77 and 68 years old respectively, are in good health. They are members of Trinity Lutheran church and Mrs. Otto is an active member of the Ladies Society of that church. Mr. Otto has been employed as gardener at the George A. Whiting estate since 1922. Gardening has been his hobby and his vocation since the days when as a young boy, he learned the trade at Kuel's by Naugatuck Interprommer, Conn.

When he came to Wisconsin, he settled in Winnebago county, purchased a farm and engaged in farming for about 8 years. He was married Oct. 26, 1887 to a German girl, Miss Augusta Wolf, daughter of Fred Wolf, Fremont. Later, the Ottos moved to Neenah, living in a home on the corner of Fifth and Lincoln streets on the island where Mr. Otto did gardening work. In later years he built a greenhouse in Menasha and in 1902 purchased the Neenah greenhouse from his brother on Main street. He was a well-known florist until 1920 when he sold his greenhouse, now owned by William Kraemer.

Blocking Drills Feature Practice Of Menasha Squad

Menasha—Blocking, blocking and more blocking received emphasis in the Menasha high school grid practice yesterday afternoon. The first squad was given the ball and shot plays at the second string. However, their gains were not consistent and on several occasions the reserves piled up the play behind the line of scrimmage. When the men carried out their blocking assignments perfectly, the plays went for long gains.

Coach N. A. Calder drilled the same squad that started the Kaukauna game with Heiss at quarterback, Finch and Knoll at halfbacks and Michalkiewicz at fullback. Osiewalski worked most of the time at end on the first squad with the rest of the line the same.

Most of the ineffectiveness of the Menasha attack, which has piled up many yards in midfield but has pushed over only one touchdown in the last four games, has been laid to the quarterbacking. Search for an effective signal-caller continued today with various players attempting to call the signals in the huddle.

Despite the difference in their records, the Menasha squad will not enter the game Saturday with an under-dog attitude. Although they have been beaten, they figure that the breaks will soon come their way. Defensive efforts will be concentrated upon stopping the Reed brothers, particularly John, upon whom much of the Shawano attack depends.

Committee Will Suggest Building Of New Tool House

Use of Commercial Street Paving Bricks to be Recommended

Neenah—The committee on streets, sidewalks and bridges will recommend to the city council at its next meeting to build a new tool house adjacent to the city garage on Main street, it was decided at a meeting Tuesday night at the city hall.

The committee made no decision as to the purchase of a motor street grader.

The committee will recommend building a structure from old bricks taken from N. Commercial street and will suggest that the building be 164 feet long and 63 feet wide.

The proposed building will be constructed on the site on which the city house is presently situated. The city house which is currently used for lodging transients and dependent bachelors, will be razed and the lumber will be used to repair the Neenah Fresh Air camp.

A driveway will be constructed between the proposed tool house and the city garage, and a central heating plant will be installed in the new structure which will supply heat for the garage. New brick will be used on the front of the building.

The tool house will be made large enough to serve as a warehouse for supplies for the city water works.

The committee chose to recommend a new structure in preference to building an addition to the city garage. The addition would have been 100 feet long and 50 feet wide.

Menasha—Activity is becoming feverish in the Menasha public schools as 600 students prepare for the first annual music festival. Less than four weeks remain in which to prepare for the event, which will be held Tuesday, Nov. 23, under the direction of Franklyn LeFevre, music supervisor.

Four hundred children are holding practices at the Butte des Morts gymnasium for the cantata, "The Legend of Sleepy Hollow," to be sung by the combined grade schools. Mr. LeFevre is afraid that he may not be able to use all of this large group because of the lack of room. Not all of the group can find room on the stage.

The high school choir has been doing good work in rehearsal and may appear as part of the program. Another music class has been organized in the high school, making it possible for students to take music any period of the afternoon.

The popular "Barn Dance Novelties" will be part of the program Nov. 23. Miss Celia Boyce is preparing the third grade at the Butte des Morts school for the presentation of this number.

Lawrence Preps For Ripon "11"

Brush Up on Fundamentals, Scrimmage Against Frosh

LAWRENCE college gridders got down to hard work last night as they went through a lengthy session that kept them out at Whiting field until almost 6 o'clock. The last 45 minutes were under floodlights. Lawrence plays Ripon here Saturday afternoon in the feature event of the Viking homecoming.

The first part of the drill featured limbering up exercises and kicking and running. The linemen then drew a session with Assistant Coach Adolf Dillon during which they were impressed with the idea that there are other ways of trying to stop offensive line play than standing up and trying to handle two opponents at a time.

Before they finished they had learned that submerging and going over the top are perfectly good maneuvers, that you don't try to work on both men and instead try out-manuevering one, and that if you turn an opponent into the play you aren't doing a half bad job.

In the meantime Coach Paul Derr had the backs and ends aside giving them several new plays. Ken Westberg, who cracked a couple ribs in the Carleton game, worked with the backs for the first time in weeks while Glenn Lockery also saw a little service.

After the fundamentals and instruction there was a lengthy scrimmage session with the freshmen. It wasn't entirely satisfactory for while Novakowski rambled as usual on the sweeps the attempts at punishing the line left a lot to be desired.

Some of the linemen still were highly lethargic and more than one freshman had to admit that he got in a good tackle for the reason that some veteran had neglected to do more than give him a passing tap instead of blocking and taking him entirely out of the play.

What is considered to be the better group of freshmen spent their time learning plays for Friday afternoon's game with St. Norbert college freshmen here. The group included among others Vane Jones, big tackle, and Jack Sellers, both of Appleton. Sellers is playing in the yearling backfield because of his speed in carrying the ball.

Chuters Winners Over Kimberly in Donkey Basketball

Little Chute-Donkey basketball made its debut in Little Chute last evening when the Legion team defeated a Kimberly team by a 32 to 14 score at Legion hall. This evening the donkeys will show at Neenah armory.

The first half saw the Chuters leading by a score of 18 to 10 but in the second half H. Van Dyke dropped six buckets while the Kimberly riders were trying to get their mounts headed in the right direction.

The second half also saw the donkeys get touch and "Spots" Huntman's mount decided to lie down and quit while several others weren't inclined to play any more than necessary. A fair crowd enjoyed the fun.

The Chuter team saw P. Wildenberg and H. Van Dyke forwards, O. Bongers, center, B. Bongers and N. Lucassen, guards. For Kimberly it was C. Vander Velden and Huntington forwards, Van Boogaard, center, Van Beck and E. Vander Velden, guards.

Athletic Policy To be Voted on by Chicago Students

Chicago—(U)—The Daily Maroon, University of Chicago's student newspaper, will conduct a poll Friday to determine undergraduate feeling on the question of whether the university should continue to participate in intercollegiate athletics.

With Chicago's athletic fortunes at probably their lowest point, the Maroon has started a campaign for a program of intramural sports to replace Chicago's intercollegiate sports, and its editors want to know what the student body thinks of the proposition.

Reports that Chicago might withdraw from the Big Ten have been denied repeatedly by athletic officials. Athletic Director T. Nelson Metcalf said last week, when the rumor made one of its periodic appearances, that Chicago has conference football schedules for 1938 and 1939, and that he was seeking two non-conference games for next year's list.

Zuppke Yearns For Illini Win Over Michigan

Victory Saturday Would Square 18-Game Series With Wolverines

CHICAGO—(U)—There will be no championship glitter connected with the battle, but Bob Zuppke still has a special yearning for an Illinois triumph over Michigan Saturday.

For Michigan is the only Big Ten rival holding a victory margin over Zuppke-coached bands of fighting Illini. Since 1919 when Michigan ended its long absence from the conference and met Illinois under Zuppke for the first time, the Wolverines have won nine out of 17 battles. A victory in huge Memorial Stadium Saturday would square the Michigan account for the master strategist in his silver jubilee year at Illinois.

Zuppke has an edge over seven big ten teams, while the other series, with Ohio State, is all even.

Display Power

The Illinois offense, altered for the Michigan occasion, displayed live power yesterday in scoring five touchdowns against third stringers and freshmen. Michigan has scouted Illinois, but Coach Harry Kipke continued to concentrate on the Wolverines' attack, with the observation that it "would be useless to put a lot of time into a defense for plays you know aren't going to be used."

At Notre Dame, Coach Elmer Layden forgot all about last week's victory over Navy as he watched two reserve teams equipped with Minnesota power plays, run the eye-balls out of the Irish varsity. Striving to halt the kind of maneuvers they will face at Minneapolis Saturday, the Notre Dame regulars yielded two touchdowns, both made through sustained drives. The Gophers' workout was conducted in strictest secrecy, a plan Coach Bernie Bierman expects to follow for the next two days.

Long Scrimmage

The powerful Ohio State squad was given a long offensive scrimmage, a move on the part of Coach Francis Schmidt to rid the Buckeyes of the idea that Chicago's brave little band will be a push-over Saturday. The Maroons again worked on their offensive, with Coach Clark Shaughnessy still making shifts to patch up the reserve department.

Northwestern's Wildcats plotted a defense for Wisconsin's aerial game, while the Badgers scrimmaged the freshman as Coach Harry Stuhldreher sought the punch so noticeably missing against Pittsburgh last week. Freshmen did so much damage with Purdue line plays that Trubbs threatened two-hour scrimmages daily until the Hawkeye varsity snaps out of it. Injuries, particularly to backs Tony Juska and Tony Ippolito, hampered the Boilermakers.

Bo McMillin concentrated on Indiana's defense, but found time for a brisk rehearsal of new forward passing plays the Hoosiers will use against Nebraska's powerhouse at Lincoln Saturday.

Madison—(U)—Bill Schmitz of Madison, versatile University of Wisconsin halfback, was the student infirmity.

For overnight observation after a strenuous scrimmage between the varsity and freshmen yesterday.

Schmitz, who has been the mainstay of the Badgers' pass attack, complained of feeling dizzy when he got back to his feet after being tackled hard by George Faust, freshman guard of Mayville. His injury, however, was not considered serious.

Long Scrimmage

Both the varsity and freshmen players, the latter using Northwestern formations, engaged vigorously in the long scrimmage. The varsity was on the offensive during most of the workout, following a short review of Northwestern plays by Mike Hanley, Badger scout.

Schmitz contributed several sparkling pass plays before he left the field. One accounted for a 70 yard gain. On another play Schmitz swept around left end for 75 yards with the aid of good downfield blocking. The varsity's ground game, however, did not click consistently.

Jim Riordan of Rhinelander, who was outstanding on defense against Pittsburgh, replaced Fred Benz, Milwaukee, at left end and John Murray, Plymouth, Pa., took over Neil Pohl's place at center. Coach Harry Stuhldreher indicated both are likely to start against the Wildcats here Saturday.

Larry Kelley of Yale won't play pro ball.

New York—(U)—Larry Kelley, Yale's 1936 all-America end, today announced he had abandoned the idea of playing pro football for the part time role as a sports writer.

Instead of playing with the Boston Shamrocks of the American Professional Football league, Kelley said he would cover the more important games of the current season for a chain of newspapers. Kelley teaches and coaches football at Yaddie school.

former all-American tackle at the University of Alabama, Lee will play with the Packers Sunday at Detroit, Lambeau said.

Lateral Pass Quietly Passing Out of Stadia

NEW YORK—(U)—The lateral pass, two years ago the people's choice as football's most exciting bit of byplay, is quietly expiring in the nation's stadia. If 1937 football technique has a trend, this is it—the lateral passes.

From the outset the coaches looked on the lateral with suspicion. Even two years ago, when fans and writers were loudly hailing the "new type of offense," the men who shape the football styles with a conservatism worthy of a senator from Vermont were opposed to the play's general use.

"Nice Play To Watch"

The lateral's two most inspired protagonists, Andy Kerr of Colgate and Francis Schmidt of Ohio State, now are casting sheep's eyes at the old stalwarts and foregoing the quick transfer in the open field.

"The lateral pass is a nice play to watch, but dangerous," says Lou Little, Columbia maestro. "Dove-tailed into a balanced offense it is a factor but not an important one in advancing the ball."

Try To Hide Ball

A survey of 20 of Saturday's major games shows not one of the 40 teams resorting to lateral legged-for-plays for scoring plays. But efforts to hide the ball and the point of attack have been weakened, the reports show. Spinners and fake spinners, single, double and fake reverses abound and the forward pass are employed.

Mal Stevens, N. Y. U. coach, offers a solution for the play's gradual diminution. "It's too hard to teach when a coach doesn't have unlimited time to work with his players. Then, too, it takes a mature player to use it. Youngsters are liable to tighten up when hit and they have to lateral before contact is made to be effective."

Chaff 'n Chatter

BECAUSE we went to Waukegan to see Lawrence take a rimming from Carroll, we didn't see Appleton defeated by Green Bay East. But apparently there wasn't much the Terrors could do about the Red Devils for whom we had a lot of respect after watching them take Oshkosh a couple weeks ago.

And in going over the statistics of the game, the difference in the two teams was even more pronounced. East made 13 first downs to Appleton's 3. The Red Devils picked up 234 yards during the afternoon and Appleton only 84. Of this total East gained 176 yards from scrimmage and 58 from passes. Appleton gained 62 from scrimmage and 22 from passes.

Almost everyone who saw East marveled at the timing of its plays, its precision and the smooth manner in which the quarterback set up his opponents and then used his plays accordingly. A few years ago we felt that was due to Louis Means' coaching but there hasn't been a hitch in the two years Tom Harden has been there.

Perhaps next fall we'll go up to Green Bay about four afternoons straight to see how they coach those kids. It will be time well spent.

You won't see Swede Johnson with the Packers any more this season. He has been leased to the Cleveland Rams for the remainder of the year. He's still the property of the Bays, however, the transaction taking place because the Rams are so hard up for players.

Bernard Scherer of the Packers has a jersey with abbreviated sleeves because, in the heat of the all-star game at Chicago, he cut them off at the elbow. He's still wearing the jersey and he probably has occasional chilly reminders of the big game.

St. Mary's Catholic school football team was tied by St. Boniface, De Pere, last Saturday, 12-12. E. Felt and J. Felt scored for the Appleton team.

My pal, John Walter of the Green Bay Press-Gazette, was puffed up like a pouter pigeon when he went back to Green Bay Saturday after East rubbed it into Appleton and he still felt that way Sunday or Monday when he wrote his column. So we'll have to pass the comment on to you below but first we'll have to admit that the ticket selling arrangements even brought cracks from Appleton fans.

We frankly admit it's a mystery why a chap like Werner Witte, who usually has at least two eyes out for a big game, missed on the biggest game of the season. And especially when he carried a rabbit's foot, four leaf clover, horseshoe, camphor and everything you could imagine for a week to bring good weather and prayed that the game would be a sellout.

But anyway, here's Pompos Jack's column about the game: "The Japanese never took a Chinese village with more completeness than Green Bay's football-minded fans captured Appleton Saturday afternoon, as the Red Devils of East high drove the first tack into the 1937 Valley conference championship bunting."

Officials of Appleton high school were astounded at the mass invasion, and were entirely unprepared for it. Chiering East high students, several hundred of them, poured from the special North Western train and paraded the downtown section, waving their colors, while

Two Sophomores Drill In Hilltop Backfield

Milwaukee—(U)—Two husky sophomores were installed in the Marquette university backfield today as Coach Paddy Driscoll brushed up the Hilltop offense for next Saturday's inter-sectional football battle at Chicago with unbeaten and untied San Clara university.

Andy Bakula, quarterback, and Dan Koster, fullback, worked with the first team in an extended dummy scrimmage session yesterday. The backfield was rounded out by Captain Ray Sonnenberg and Harry Leysehaar, halfbacks.

Johnny Maltch and Morgan Busch started at the quarterback and fullback posts respectively in last Saturday's game against Michigan State.

Marion-Marion high, conference leader, will combat Manawa Wolves at Manawa and will do their best to go through the conference undefeated Friday. According to the score of the Manawa-Kimberly game Marion should come through with colors flying.

Meyer, halfback, has a total of 76 points. So far this season Marion has scored five victories, one tie and had no defeats. It has 179 points to opponents' 20.

Marion's scores for the season follow:

YNOPSIS: Abducted from Baltimore on Prescott Fanning's yacht, Janet gets word to Neil a young federal agent who loves her. He dashes to Chesapeake's harbor, boards the yacht and finds, in a locked cabin, Fanning shot dead and Janet in a faint, a gun beside her. Neil hides her nearby in a disused liner, then joins Mark Bonninger, keen local investigator, to keep tabs on developments. He thinks Janet shot Fanning until he learns a man was hiding in a closet on the yacht. Then he suspects and quizzes queer little Eyster, who hated Fanning. Also in the picture are Kettering, a Baltimore lawyer down to fish, and Mrs. Buckles, a tough who has been trailing Neil.

Chapter 26
Following Eyster's Clue
FANNING used to go to a fine apartment house on Charles Street Avenue. Eyster said "Sometimes I seen him go in. Sometimes I picked him up coming out. I don't know who he went to see there. I got thrown out when I went in to ask I wasn't the kind of guy who could go in such a house. But you could."

This sounded like a valuable lead to Neil. "What's the number of the house?" he asked.

3420 Charles Street Avenue.

Neil made a mental note of the number. He took out his pipe and blew through it. "Stopped up. Got anything to clean it with?"

"I use a nail," Eyster said, grinning. "You'll find it on the bureau." When he got his pipe going, Neil said: "Well, I must be moving on."

"Don't go!" pleaded Eyster. "Tell me more about Fanning. Did he see you coming? Did he say anything?"

Prudence warned Neil to string him along. "Don't like to talk about it," he muttered.

A look of doubt appeared in Eyster's face. "It was you smoked Fanning, wasn't it?"

"You wouldn't expect me to admit it in so many words, would you?" Neil answered grinning.

Eyster's face cleared. "No! No! You don't have to admit anything to me, fellow! You're all right! You're a grand guy!"

Neil went downstairs rubbing his lip. The theory that he had so hopefully erected on the way up was already tottering. But it had not fallen. He was far from convinced that Eyster had not shot Fanning.

He found Bonninger in the little office back of the store, engulged in the detail of his job. Messengers were continually coming and going, reports arriving from the local search parties and by phone from the state police in other counties. Bonninger was making arrangements to have the harbor dragged for a body.

Neil's whole attitude toward the case had changed now. Satisfied that Janet was in no way implicated, he was as keen to solve the mystery as Bonninger was. Also, now he could let his real liking for Bonninger come out.

"Look, Mark," he said "If we could find out what Fanning was up to in Baltimore, it would be a long step forward. It would lead us right to the solution."

"Well, I'm not sure I can go as far as that with you," Bonninger said, smiling at his enthusiasm. "But at that, it's important. I have a man on the job, but he hasn't got anywhere."

"Suppose I go up to town and look into it, outside of what anybody else is doing," said Neil.

Fanning had become a kind of public figure and I ought to be able to pick up something."

"Certainly is good of you to suggest it," said Bonninger. "I hate to cut in on your vacation."

"Not at all," said Neil. "I'm interested in this."

"All right. I'll give you a police car and a constable to drive you. Get something to eat first."

Neil ordered an early lunch in the hotel, and sat down to eat it in

Sino-Japanese Fight Becomes War of Suicides

Report Many Cases of Fa- tality Heroism Ending In Self Destruction

BY JACK STINNETT
AP Feature Service Writer

Oriental temperament coupled with a hatred brewing more than 60 years is making the Sino-Japanese conflict a "suicide war." In the two months of major conflict, an amazing number of cases of fanatical heroism ending in self-destruction have been reported on both sides. They range from the traditional hara-kiri of the Japanese to the suicide of masses of 300 more Chinese who have walked stolidly into the withering fire of enemy batteries.

On the one hand are the Japanese, aflame again with their long-smoldering feeling of "manifest destiny," and subscribing to a point of view, generations old, which has made of suicide a formal ceremony of expiation, devotion, protest or contempt.

Present United Front

On the other are the Chinese, presenting their most united front in recent times and giving vent to their new nationalism in feverish patriotism.

Early in the conflict, Shimoza Maho, a Japanese merchant cast himself into the sea from the suicide island of Oshima that the government might have his $3,000 life insurance to add to the war chest.

Commander Kaoru Fujita, in Tokyo, divorced his bride of three months that he might have no distraction in his fervent application to the war. Three months later, in north China, he met heroic death in action.

Quicker Than Hara-Kiri

Tokyo newspapers reported that Japanese aviators were equipped with pistols as well as the small, traditional Samurai swords. If they were shot down and had no time before capture to perform the rites of hara-kiri, they might shoot themselves with the pistol, the dispatch explained.

In August, while an air battle raged over Shanghai, observers saw a Japanese plane catch fire. Whirling his ship in a great flaming arc, the pilot, instead of bailing out, did a loop-the-loop, and the Chinese lines carrying with him a death-dealing cargo of bombs.

Over Peiping, Japanese aviators defied anti-aircraft guns to sky-write reports of their victories on other fronts. In the Woonung area, a dozen Japanese, stripped to red loin cloths, swam a creek under fire clambered up the muddy banks and with their bare bodies, spiked a Chinese battery.

White Band of Death

At the junction of the Whangpoo and Yangtze rivers 70 picked members of the Shirodassakuti, the "White Band of Death," went ashore in a small launch. These few who reached the wall of flame that was the Chinese land battery, died in hand-to-hand combat.

Such cases are, by no means, confined to Nippon's horde. There was the Chinese aviator who engaged four enemy bombers and returned again and again to the combat until his plane was shot to pieces.

Another of China's "devil dogs of the air" staged a lone raid over Shanghai in a September dusk. Flying low, he dived into the hail from anti-aircraft guns, to drop bombs uncomfortably close to the Japanese flagship, Izuma.

For days, daring Chinese operated a fleet of mosquito-like sea-skiffs in the Whangpoo and Yangtze, defying the gunboats to blow them from the water as they dashed madly on solo runs into the fleet to fire torpedoes at close range.

March To Annihilation

It was the Japanese who reported, in the battle of Lofien, a women's "battalion of death," composed of 20-year-old Chinese communist girls who did not know the meaning of the word retreat.

And in the same battle, a company of 300 grimly determined Chinese rushed through the Japanese lines, inflicting terrific losses and continuing their advance until their battalion was annihilated.

Philadelphia — (4) — Youth is a bar to grand jury service in the court of Judge Curtis Bok.

"I would like to serve but I am too young and I feel that I am incapable to do the service."

Judge Bok refused her request. It will be good education for you and you should welcome the opportunity," he said.

Hollywood News And Gossip

By ROBBIN COONS

Hollywood — For Tamara Geva, for a while, a leg will be something to stand on.

She stands on two of the prettiest Broadway stage or Hollywood ever saw. But Hollywood—meaning the cameras—won't see them. Tamara, Russian-born dancer-actress, is hiding them as she makes her film debut.

Besides being something to stand on, a leg to Tamara is also something one must not discuss.

"I don't mind," she says, "but anything one says is so likely to be misunderstood. At present I wish to forget dancing for a while—to be seen as an actress—but if I said so, that, too, might be misconstrued."

Bird Ballet Burlesque

Born on St. Patrick's day, the daughter of a Tartar father and a Swedish mother, Tamara was trained in the Russian imperial ballet school and came to America in "Chauve Souris." Ziegfeld signed her for "Whoopee," and her other musicals on the stage included "Three's a Crowd," "Flying Colors," and "On Your Toes." In the last-named she added acting to dancing, and presented a burlesque of ballet—in a way a revenge for the wearing hours of guelling practice ballet had earned of her.

Tamara appeared in an "acting role" in an unsuccessful play, "The Divine Drudge," and this opened the dramatic field to her. Recently she did "Idiot's Delight" in summer stock. In pictures she wants to continue as a dramatic actress—and forget the dancing, and the legs.

In appearance a short of exotic Margaret Sullivan, Tamara shied from film offers until she found one she considered suitable. She plays a temperamental opera star—but doesn't sing—in "Manhattan Merry-Go-Round."

Hates Onions and Liquor

She herself is not too temperamental. She loses her temper seldom, but when she does—you're supposed to duck. She never diets, like a glass of sherry, has a few superlatives, loves to have her head scratched. She makes elaborate plans, usually abandons them for a spur-of-the-moment idea.

She hates to pack clothes, write letters, cook, give parties, sew, or eat onions. Off the screen she wears little or no make-up. She has few close friends, but makes acquaintances easily. She is a good story-teller, a good listener, and a good conversationalist. Her accent is slight.

She has a lock of hair (light brown) on her forehead which never gets a chance to grow. She continually twists it while thinking. She has tried to break the habit without success.

She was formerly married to George Balanchine, now in Hollywood on the "Goldwyn" picture. They are divorced, but friendly. Both were pupils of the famed Diaghileff.

such a position that he could watch all who came and went in the lobby adjoining. It was a curiously assorted crowd—villagers, county people, newspaper men and plain jays.

Finally his search was rewarded. Through the door from outside came a great hulking figure with a repulsive flattened features. As soon as Neil laid eyes on him he guessed that this was his man. When the milling crowd opened sufficiently for him to get a look at his feet, he saw crumpled shoes earth clinging to the big shoes. Then he was sure.

The man pushed through to the desk to ask a question and afterwards turned to enter the bar on the other side where beer and soft drinks were sold. When he presented his back Neil received another shock. He had seen that back before, with shoulders so heavy they were bowed down under their own weight, letting the arms hang down in front like an ape's. The stoop-shouldered man! Here was the substance of the shadow that had dogged Neil from the start.

He had not yet spotted Neil. A solitary, sullen man. He spoke to nobody and when others stood naturally jostled his size, he made believe not to hear. He drank his beer alone. Probably playing a lone hand, Neil figured. Eyster knows him, but he is in terror of him. Certainly it must have been one of these two who had shot Fanning.

When he had finished eating, Neil strode out and paused at the desk. "Wickies," he asked "who is the big fellow at the bar—the stoop-shouldered man?"

"That's the guy you was asking about this morning. Ira Buckless is the name."

"When did he come?"

"Late Tuesday night."

"How did he get to Absalom's?"

"I couldn't tell you, mister. I just seen him walk in the door. The hotel keeper's face sharpened with curiosity. 'Why do you ask?'"

"Oh, nothing. Thought I had seen him before somewhere."

As Neil made his way to the door, Buckless happened to turn

A Rich Old Lady

At two o'clock Neil was deposited at the door of a handsome modern apartment house on Baltimore's finest street. The doorman and the elevator boy were negroes. He showed them the photographs of Fanning, but they shook their heads. Never had seen such a person, they said. After all, the photographs of a dead man do not convey much.

"I know he was a frequent visitor to somebody in this house," said Neil. "Picture a man six feet two in height, slim and broad shouldered, black hair and eyes, rosy skin, very fine looking. Always elegantly dressed, fond of unusual shirts and cravats."

The two negroes glanced at each other, grinning. "Miss Rayner's friend," they said.

"Who is Miss Rayner?"

"Don't you know Miss Emma Rayner, boss? Everybody knows her. One of the richest women in Baltimore. She real old now, and never goes out no more."

"That's the gentleman what come to see her all right, but he look different when he's dead."

"Well, most of us do," said Neil.

"What name did he give when he came here?"

"Didn't give no name."

"Don't you have to send the names up?"

"Yes sir, boss. But the first time he come somebody brought him, and after that we was told to show him up whenever he come."

"What other gentlemen callers has Miss Rayner had recently?"

"Nobody but her lawyer, Mr. Osgood, and her agent, Mr. Barney."

Neil made a memo. "Well, show me up now," he said.

The negroes hesitated, but he faced them down. The door of Miss Rayner's apartment was opened by a neat colored maid. "Does Miss Rayner know you?" she asked.

"No."

"Taint no use then, Miss Rayner see no gentlemen callers she don't know."

"Tell her it's somebody from Mr. Prescott Fanning."

She presently returned saying: "Please step this way, sir."

Neil was introduced to an immense living room crowded from end to end with the furnishings and glimmered with light. Though it was a fine June day, all the windows were closed and there was a little wood fire burning. At first he thought he was alone in the room, but presently he distinguished a tiny figure buried in a deep chair before the fire. She looked about 80, but her sunken cheeks were bravely painted and she wore an elaborately curled auburn wig.

"You come from Mr. Fanning?" she said eagerly. "I was expecting to hear from him."

Neil was considerably taken aback, because she spoke of him in the present tense. "He was a friend of yours?" he stammered.

"I knew him, certainly. What word have you brought me?"

This was uncanny. "How long have you known him?" asked Neil, sparing for time.

Oh, several months," she said impatiently. "What's that got to do with it?"

"Who introduced you to him?"

"Miss Rayner set up. 'Young man, I don't know you, don't propose to be cross-examined by a stranger and after that we was told to show him up whenever he come."

Kaukauna—The Gustman Chevroleets swept back into first place in the Commercial bowling league at the Schell alleys last night by sweeping their 3-game series with the Gertz Taverns, former league leaders, while the second place team, Hofensperger Meats, was dropping three straight to the Mellow Brews.

The Gustman attack was led by Henry Olm who connected for a series of 528 on games of 156, 162 and 210. Ed Rennie's 494 including a game of 201 was also an important factor in the Gustman victory. The losers included two 500 series in their scores, Ed McMorin rolling 514 on games of 182, 177 and 155, and Jack Van Lieshout hitting 507 including a high game of 208.

The Mellow Brews 3-game sweep over the Hofensperger's gave them a tie for the league lead. L. Kemp's 574 on games of 208, 183 and 163 led the winner's attack, with Charley Schell hitting 561 on games of 181, 166 and 214 to lead the losers.

Leo Zarter rolled games of 192, 173 and 188 to lead the Miller High Life to a two out of three game sweep over the Little Chute Bottlers, who were led by Ed King's series of 515.

Kaukauna Eleven Works on Defense For Neenah Game

Third Place in Standings Will be at Stake in Conference Tilt

Kaukauna—With but two days left in which to prepare for the last conference tilt of the season here with Neenah Saturday afternoon Coach Paul E. Little again sent his Kaukauna High school charges through two hours of concentrated practice.

Saturday is also Kaukauna's homecoming, and, if hard work has anything to do with it, the Kaws should be on the long end of the final score. The two practices held so far this week have been the most intensive of the season, and Little has promised the gridders the same menu for today and tomorrow. On Friday the squad will taper off with a light signal drill.

Yesterday afternoon's practice was spent in developing a defense against Neenah formations, with the second stringers running through the Neenah team's favorite plays. The scrubs were, on the whole, unsuccessful, but their offense is not to be compared to the one Neenah will put on the field Saturday. The visitors have a chance to edge the Kaws out of third place in the Northeastern conference by going home with a win, and, on the other hand, the Kaws need the game to take the third rung themselves.

All the Kaukauna players will be in good shape for the game. No one received any injuries during the 6-0 victory over Menasha Friday night, and Alker, Giordana and McCormick have recovered from injuries prior to the game with West De Pere. The addition of McCormick, who has seen little action since the St. Mary's game, is particularly welcome. He is one of the outstanding backs in the conference when on, and may pick homecoming to demonstrate that fact.

The largest home crowd of the season is expected for the homecoming tilt, with many alumni returning for the weekend celebration. The Kaws, who have so far relied mainly on straight football, are expected to open up with all the tricks in their football bag, and give the spectators a wide open game.
